THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Berlin, April 11.—Emperor William met Professor Delitzsch, the assyriologist, for the first time since his majesty wrote his recent letter to Admiral von Hollman, councilor of the German Oriental society, replying to the professor's lecture on the Babylonian origin of the Bible, at a dinner Chancellor von Buelow gave before his departure for Italy. The professor is hard of hearing and the emperor's part of the dialogue was consequently in a rather high voice.

His majesty greeted him: "Well, professor, we have broken a lance together since I saw you."

"Only one lance, your majesty," replied the professor, referring to the fact that he had never replied to the emperor.

MOVEMENT FOR GRAND JURY INDORSED BY MANY PEOPLE

H N & H Bottery Capitol Bldg

[illegible] Petitions Were Circulated Yesterday and Many Meetings Held Last Night—New Ones Will Be Held Tonight—A Determined Effort to Secure Indictments Will Be Made.

The petition to District Attorney Trowbridge, asking him to officially petition the judges of the district court to call a grand jury to investigate charges made against officials and to investigate city and county offices, especially in connection with the building of the new county court house, are being rapidly signed by representative taxpayers of all political parties. Business, mining and professional men and men representing every walk of life, are signing the petitions.

Tomorrow evening a meeting of the Good Government organization and of all citizens interested will be held to discuss the steps to be taken to secure a grand jury. The six petitions will be laid before District Attorney Trowbridge Tuesday.

The movement to call a grand jury to investigate matters that are of public discussion, and which have been known for months, is the principal topic of conversation throughout the city.

It developed yesterday that the calling of such a body was considered two months ago but the strike and other matters engaging the public interest held the plans in abeyance. Judge Cunningham was approached by several citizens, among them City Auditor Harris.

The signatures are growing on all of the six lists. The two in circulation in the business district yesterday showed a total of over 200 names. There are four others in circulation, in the residence sections of Colorado Springs and in Colorado City. It is believed 1,000 names will be secured before the petitions are turned into the district attorney.

W. S. Boynton was among the signers on the list in the possession of Thomas Stark yesterday. Mr. Boynton stated a grand jury should be called, but within 20 minutes sought Mr. Stark and had his name erased, saying he had for the moment forgotten he was one of the bondsmen for Building Inspector E. O. Torrey, whose office is now under investigation.

The county commissioners discussed the matter individually, but made no statement in answer to the charge that $250,000 had disappeared in the erection of the court house, which has not been accounted for. The commissioners stated that if the taxpayers desire to go to the expense of a grand jury, it was a matter of their own.

"I do not think it will be found that the expense is justified," said Chairman Rouse, "but if they want a grand jury, let them have it."

Mayor-elect Harris said:

"The grand jury should be called if there is sufficient evidence to justify the call; but unless there is, I cannot see that it will be productive of anything but expense."

City Attorney Sheafor said:

"I don't know to what extent the grand jury may be needed in investigation of the county offices, but so far as the city officers are concerned, I am satisfied there is nothing outside of the Torrey matter that will be found to be wrong."

City Treasurer Voorhees, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the officers the taxpayers desire investigated, said:

"If the taxpayers want to go to an $8,000 or $8,000 expense for a grand jury, that's none of my concern."

Mr. Voorhees stated he was curious to know how the grand jury would proceed should an examination of the books in his office be had.

Alderman Patton came out, without hesitation, in the charge that he knew of crookedness in connection with the county court house.

"I am glad," he said, "that the agitation for a grand jury is assuming tangible shape, and I hope it will be called. I, myself, will have something to tell them.

"There was a $10,000 steal over the putting in of tiling in the new building.

"The job was done by the Marbleglue Tile company of Dayton, O., at a price of 90 cents a square foot. Exactly the same work was then done and is now being done for 49 cents. Their contract called for 17,000 feet. The job was done during the administration of Chairman Doran of the board of county commissioners. Doran is now an undertaker in Cripple Creek. There are other cases I will testify to, if given the opportunity."

Other witnesses are ready to go before the grand jury and those who are most directly interested in securing the jury state that they have much evidence which, if proven, should result in criminal prosecution. It is reported there are at least 20 citizens who are ready to give testimony.

The list of those who have signed the two lists circulated in the business district follows:

MAYOR-ELECT HARRIS APPOINTMENTS

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Omaha, April 11.—The hardest fought campaign for the control of party politics in the history of Omaha city politics ended this afternoon in a split in the Republican convention held to nominate a city ticket. From the time the chairman of the city central committee called the delegates until half their number withdrew as a body to hold a convention of their own, the proceedings were marred by a continuous uproar, and twice it was necessary for the chairman of the convention to ask the police to preserve order.

The supporters of Mayor Moore who wished to secure his nomination for a third term and those opposed to him were almost evenly divided.

On the [illegible] of wards for the nomination of mayor came the real struggle. After eight wards had been called and voted, Chairman Goss of the ninth ward demanded a poll of the second ward. The chairman ignored him and ordered the secretary to proceed with the roll call. The convention was soon in an uproar, the police flocked onto the floor to preserve order and forcibly pushed a number of the delegates into their seats. The anti-Moore men claimed the chairman was arbitrary in his ruling and when the chairman declared Moore's nomination, 71 delegates bolted.

Delegates from the fifth, sixth, seventh and ninth wards left the convention and were called to order in another hall. They organized and adjourned until next Monday night, when it is stated by the leaders, a full ticket will be placed in the field. The remainder of the ticket was nominated without further disturbance.

DEATH OF PRESIDENT OF MORMON TWELVE APPOSTLES

(By Associated Press Exclusively to Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Salt Lake, April 11.—Brigham Young, president of the council of 12 apostles of the Mormon church, died in this city tonight after a lingering illness. He was born at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1836 and was the eldest son of President Brigham Young.

Throughout his life Brigham Young had been prominently identified with the work of the Mormon church both at home and abroad. He came to Utah in 1849, making the perilous journey across the trackless plains while yet a mere boy. Like all the pioneers in this valley his early life, when not fighting hostile Indians, was spent in performing hard manual labor.

Brigham Young made several trips abroad in the interest of his church and in 1864 was president of the European mission. In 1870 he was imprisoned for refusing to turn certain church property over to the government, but was released after three weeks' confinement.

AN EXPRESS TRAIN WITH A DEAD ENGINEER

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Baltimore, April 11.—A fast-flying Royal Blue train on the Baltimore & Ohio, running between New York and Washington, ran 20 miles tonight without an engineer at the throttle. J. Frank Furley, the engineer, leaned out of the cab window at a point south of Wilmington, Del. At Hayes station, Maryland, the fireman found Furley dead in the cab. He had evidently been struck by a telegraph pole and was probably instantly killed. The fireman brought the train to Baltimore. Furley's body was taken off the train late here tonight.

STREET CAR COLLIDED WITH LUMBER WAGON

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

St. Louis, April 11.—In a collision between a Broadway street car and a lumber wagon today, six persons were injured, one probably fatally.

All the injured were passengers on the car and the latter five were badly cut by flying glass.

FATAL ACCIDENT DUE TO RUNAWAY IN ST. LOUIS

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

St. Louis, April 11.—As a result of a runaway accident today, D. P. Bates is dead, Conchman Thomas Jackson is in the hospital in a critical condition, and Mrs. J. F. Sylvester, of 55 Vandeventer place, suffered a broken collar bone and was badly bruised.

The horse drawing Mrs. Sylvester's carriage ran away. As Mr. Bates was leaving a street car the horse dashed over him, swerved and struck a trolley pole, and Mrs. Sylvester and Coachman Jackson were thrown to the ground. Mr. Bates died several hours later. He was born in Erie, Pa., in 1840, and formerly for many years had been purchasing agent of the Missouri Pacific railway.

EARTHQUAKE IN MEXICO.

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Mexico City, April 11.—A sharp earthquake shock was felt in this city at 1 o'clock tonight. Some excitement prevailed for a time, many people rushing into the streets, fearing that the earthquake might prove serious. No damage is reported.

NEGRO MURDERER SHOT BY POLICE SERGEANTS

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Shreveport, La., April 11.—Mrs. Alice Matthews, aged 45 years, wife of Frank Matthews, a well-known civil engineer, was brutally murdered in her bed early this morning by a negro. The woman's little daughter, Albie, aged 10, was fatally wounded. Arrest was the instrument employed in both cases. Ed Porter, a negro strongly suspected of the crime, was shot to death by two police sergeants, while attempting to escape. He had been run down at a point about five miles from Shreveport.

April 12.—This morning at 1:30 o'clock the body of the negro Porter was taken by a mob of about 100 men to the head of Texas street, placed on a funeral pyre and cremated. There was no noise or demonstration. The police attempted to bury the negro's body before the crowd could get it, but failed. The city has been in a state of intense excitement all night, but it is quiet now.

THE HOWARD CASE

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Frankfort, Ky., April 11.—Eleven witnesses for the commonwealth testified in the Howard case today. All had been on the stand at former trials of the case and their testimony was offered for the purpose of showing the bringing of armed mountain men to Frankfort, the shooting of William Goebel, his death and the post-mortem examination and its showing.

PROGRAM FOR INTERNATIONAL GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

St. Louis, April 11.—The official program for the International Good Roads convention to be held here April 27, 28 and 29 was issued tonight. The convention will meet in Odeon hall, and morning and afternoon sessions will be held. Many notable men are to deliver addresses, including President Roosevelt, Secretary Wilson, Andrew Patullo, General Fitzhugh Lee, General Miles, William J. Bryan, Carter Harrison, United States Senator Daniel of Virginia, Congressmen Hepburn and Brownlow, Governor Dockery of Missouri and others.

TO EDUCATE ARTILLERYMEN.

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Washington, April 11.—The secretary of war has approved a scheme proposed by General Randolph, chief of artillery, the purpose of which is to give artillerymen stationed at coast fortifications a better knowledge of the characteristics of warships as well as to acquaint them more generally with matters nautical. It is proposed among other things to provide the coast post with a set of flags and a flagstaff with a yardarm from which they may be displayed and signals exchanged with passing naval and revenue vessels.

WESTERN UNION DISPUTE DEPARTMENT

Special to the Gazette.

Washington, April 11.—The secretary of the interior has received a request from Surveyor General Vivian of Colorado to permit him to dismiss 15 clerks in the mineral division of his office and appoint new ones in their places prior to April 15. On that date all per diem clerks in the mineral division of the surveyor general's office will be included in the civil service classified list. It is Vivian's wish to reorganize his office and let out certain clerks before they receive civil service protection. The secretary of the interior has the matter under advisement and it is believed he will not permit the proposed wholesale discharge of clerks.

The First National bank of Denver was today designated reserve agent for the First National of Victor.

COMMERCIAL TREATY OF UNITED STATES AND CHINA

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Tokio, March 28, via Victoria, B. C., April 11.—It is reported that the draft of the commercial treaty between the United States and China stipulates for:

1. The opening of Pekin, Feingsien and Tatkushan as markets for foreign trade.

2. Likin barriers to be abolished.

3. No new tax nor any change in the present import and export taxes and excise on Chinese manufactures.

4. Salt and opium to be treated exactly as at present.

5. Excise only leviable at place of produce.

6. Foreigners to be allowed to buy land for mining.

7. All lawful monopolies, trade marks and copyrights to be adequately protected.

TO PROCEED AGAINST ILLINOIS CORPORATIONS

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Springfield, Ill., April 11.—Attorney-General Hamlin today certified to State Attorney Deneen of Cook county, the names of 2,500 corporations which have failed to comply with the provisions of the Illinois anti-trust act, recently upheld by the supreme court, requiring an affidavit to the effect that corporations have not entered into a pool, trust or combine.

The act of the attorney-general today will be followed by the forfeiting of bids or delinquent corporations with instructions to placard against such delinquent corporations and recover the penalty provided by law.

The penalty fixed by the statute is $50 per day, and as these corporations have been delinquent for five or six months, they are each liable to a fine of $5,000 or $10,000.

KYLE MAY BE CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR OF OHIO

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Cincinnati, April 11. Republican leaders from Columbus and other parts of Ohio, were in conference with Republican managers in Cincinnati today in the interest of Congressman Thomas Burton Kyle of Troy, for the Republican nomination for governor. It was claimed that the conditions following the elections of last Monday were such as to call for a new man at least one in the southern half of the state, and the arrangement was made that Congressman Kyle would be supported by a number of counties in the southwestern part of Ohio. Congressman Kyle is a graduate of Dartmouth and is serving his second term in congress.

HALF MILLION DOLLARS FOR REPAIRS TO THE IOWA

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Washington, April 11.—The cost of repairing and overhauling the Iowa, including the damage caused by the recent explosion is estimated by the navy department at $500,000. These repairs cannot be completed under six months. The Iowa has been in commission for about five years and prior to the accident recommendations had already been made for an extensive overhauling of the vessel.

BONES OF A GIANT.

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Dillon, Mont., April 11.—While plowing in a field near here this afternoon, George W. Finch found the bones of a giant. Both of the feet were gone, having been apparently cut off before the body was buried. Around the neck of the skeleton was a bead necklace of superior workmanship and around the waist was a belt of similar material. In life the man must have been fully seven feet tall.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY.

Huntington, W. Va., April 11.—Col. W. V. Wilder of New York, leading representative of the Kling syndicate, now suing in the federal court to recover 500,000 acres of valuable lands in the two Virginias, was indicted here today for conspiracy, it being alleged that he paid certain sum to witnesses to testify favorably to certain boundary lines. Five hundred thousand acres, valued at $15,000,000, are involved. Colonel Wilder gave bond and will be given a hearing at the next term of court.

WESTERN UNION DISPUTE DEPARTMENT

Charges Affecting Advance Information Has Been Furnished Regarding Rural Routes---New York City Cases Decided.

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Washington, April 11.—There were two important developments today in the investigation of the postoffice department. The first was the filing of charges that advance information has been furnished to wagon manufacturers regarding rural routes and the other was the issuance of an order to Postmaster Van Cott of New York city directing him to hold up all of the promotions and extra clerk allowances under recent authority for the New York city service for the next fiscal year. Fresh charges were filed by Western establishment engaged in the manufacture of vehicles alleging that competing houses had received information regarding rural free delivery routes and the appointment of rural free delivery carriers. The charges allege that the complaining company upon the announcement of appointments of rural carriers have instructions to negotiate with them for the sale of the wagons bought over other vehicles, but are not notified by the postal service and that the number of cases cited the agents made application and that the carriers had previously purchased their outfits, sometimes as long as several weeks before. It is also alleged that in one instance cited a representative of a certain factory was accompanied on the road by the regular carrier during the latter's trip, visiting and urging the sale of the article offered by the manufacturing representative.

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Washington, April 11.—In the fourth consular report from the bureau of the United States will discuss the duties of diplomatic exchanges existing between the United States and other countries. The report will be made by the bureau of foreign commerce, and will be based upon the returns from the consular officers. The circular letter addressed to consular officers by Secretary Hay on the occasion of the visit of President Roosevelt to Mexico will be included in the report.

In the Republican republic [illegible] note addressed to the state department at the Mr. Powell Clayton [illegible] called to their attention [illegible] courtesies extended to General Maximo [illegible] the visit of President Diaz to the city of Mexico on the occasion of the visit of President Roosevelt to that city. A COMMENDABLE ACT.

THE CLOSING of the gambling houses at Denver is an act which is thoroughly commendable, and which should have been done a long time ago. If the dives and dance halls in the mining camps of the state can be closed and kept closed, there is no reason why such action cannot be made operative in the capital and largest city of the state.

It is not, of course, an easy task. Those reformers who profess to believe that all that is necessary is to issue an order are mistaken in their surmise. The fact is, that nothing but constant and untiring vigilance will serve to uproot this gambling evil. It will, apparently, be suppressed this week, but next week it will break out in a new place where it will be carried on so quietly that the police will be unable to find it. This is true of every city, and has been true of Colorado Springs.

Nevertheless, there is a great deal of difference between an earnest and determined effort to enforce the law and that laxity which winks at violation of the law. Not only is the good name of Denver concerned in the matter, but the welfare of the entire state of which Denver is the capital. Hence, it is to be hoped that the present attempts to shut off gambling will be lasting, sincere and determined.

NEW JERSEY'S INCORPORATION MILL.

THE STATE of New Jersey, the favored home of thousands of corporations, doing business all over the country, is discovering that to be the home of such concerns is a not altogether enviable distinction.

Beginning about five years ago, New Jersey made its corporation laws so free and easy that concerns from all over the country flocked there to take out their incorporation papers. Entire office buildings, some of them many stories in height, were devoted to keeping the records, or alleged records, of these concerns. As many as a thousand corporations were sometimes lodged under a single roof, and many briefless lawyers were enabled to eke out a very comfortable existence by giving the use of their names as local incorporators of these various concerns. It was simply a technical evasion of the law, and these men were paid to do it without any knowledge of or interest in the concerns which they were aiding.

It was natural that many bogus irresponsible and illegitimate concerns should find a lodgment in that state. This fact has been developed very strikingly in the proclamation of Governor Murphy, in which nearly 1,000 or 5 per cent of the whole, are ushered out of existence for not paying their annual tax. The concerns thus dissolved are capitalized at over $200,000,000. Their stock has been floated indiscriminately, and at a fictitious value. Don, in probably every state and territory in the union. This stock, which has been bought mainly by small investors, is now worthless, for it may be taken for granted that a concern which cannot pay a sufficient tax to retain its corporate existence is not of much value to its stockholders.

In view of this state of things the mining promoter of Colorado is a pretty decent sort of a person for nearly every one who goes into mining knows that it is a hazardous business, and that the losses are far more than the profits, taking the industry as a whole.

The state of New Jersey, if it really desires to hold up its head among the self-respecting states of the union, should immediately take steps to purge itself by changing its laws to the end that promoters may not have such an easy time in deluding the honest people of the country.

The death of Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the senate, brings home the fact that a man may be a marked success in his profession and make a name for himself despite the fact that he is deprived of some of nature's most valuable aids. When a very young child he began to lose his eyesight, but, nevertheless, went to school and studied steadily until in his 20's he became totally blind. Notwithstanding this, however, he continued his work in the ministry and on the lecture platform, and became a figure of national prominence. He was an able and eloquent speaker, and had friends by legions throughout the country.

The Democrats of Cripple Creek may secure another alderman, thereby giving them a majority of one in the city council. The judges of election in precinct 17 have filed affidavits setting forth that clerical errors were made which would have an important effect on the result of such a close election. An investigation is to be made by the canvassing board with the result that the Democratic contestant is likely to be seated.

Santo Domingo, not having been in the public prints much of late, bobs up with a real battle. The government troops, under President Vasquez, attempted to retake the capital, but after two attacks were repulsed. It is quite likely if the conflict continues that the United States will land a file of marines and suppress the whole business.

PLAIN TALK NO. 999.

THE GAZETTE has been privileged to secure an advance copy of one of the plain talks which are now being issued in serial form in the columns of an evening contemporary.

"You may have heard from a variety of sources that Colorado Springs has had in the past a choice assortment of corrupt officials, whose hands were in the people's pockets rather than their own.

"It was our duty to the party to deny all this before election, but now we have seen a great light, and we are forced to admit that it is all true.

"You may have heard that a building inspector was corrupt, incompetent, and that he owed his office to his political services. Before election, in order to get the votes, it was necessary for us to make very light of this malfeasance and to put up a strong bluff that it was a rare occurrence.

"Now, however, as we have succeeded in pulling the wool over the people's eyes once more, it is our painful duty to announce that the action of the building inspector is a shame and a disgrace and not only that, but there are many other cases of inefficiency, neglect of duty and of 'getting away with the swag.'

"It was also necessary before election to assure the people with our hands upon our hearts that the Republican convention expressed the will of 5,000 free and untrammeled citizens in naming a ticket, and our indignation at anyone who ventured to suggest such a thing as a slate or a boss was wondrous to behold.

"Now, however, after election is over, and we are looking for more votes for the future it is necessary for us to say in our humblest way, that, as a matter of fact the people were not consulted in making up the ticket but hereafter they will be. That word hereafter, Mr. Easy Taxpayer, always has such an attractive sound. We like to use it.

"Of course, now that we are obliged to admit that there is corruption in every corner of our municipal house, now that we are making our eleventh-hour confession of incompetency, we have got to put it at the door of somebody. Why not, therefore lay it onto the two officials who brought the latest job to light? Consistency may be a jewel, but we are not fond of jewelry.

"So, therefore in order to convince you that we are in deadly earnest about this matter, we propose to discharge the villain who had the temerity to interfere with our own private system of bookkeeping. If there is to be any checking, or accounting, we want to attend to that job ourselves, and then we know it will be done right. Such impudence as is found in an employe who asks a brother employe to turn over money collected six months ago is not to be tolerated. Away with him.

"Now, Mr. Taxpayer, these statements must convince you that we intend to be good. We do not intend to use a cent more money than we can get hold of. We do not intend to issue a single dollar more in bonds than the people will vote for. We propose to be humane and charitable and take care of all the 'boys.' In doing these things we firmly expect your support two years hence, for REMEMBER the first duty of all good citizens is to STAND BY THE PARTY!"

ANOTHER INDIAN OUTRAGE

Some time ago the Indian commissioner issued an order requiring the red man to get his hair cut. It was suggested that the use of paint on the face and body be discouraged. The order came so near causing an Indian outbreak that it had to be revoked. Now comes the announcement that the commissioner contemplates a whole-sale christening of the red men. The picturesque nomenclature of the various Indian tribes is to give way to common, ordinary names selected by the Indian bureau from an old Albany city directory. Instead of 'Rain-in-the-Face,' 'Mud-on-His-Nose,' 'Eagle Heart,' 'Frozen Feet' and 'Man-Who-Eats-Up-Wolves,' the red men will be given such names as Bill Jones, Jim Brown, Mike O'Flannagan, Ole Olesen and Peter Kosciuskski.

In this way the red man or what is left of him, is going to be "Americanized." Of course the Indian will not be consulted about it. Having no voice in the party councils and no votes to deliver, he will have no voice in the selection of a new name. It is not customary to consult the Indian about what he wants.

But what right has the Indian bureau to rechristen the redman anyway? Why should the bureau menace the country with a threatened Indian uprising in an attempt to transform picturesque "Roaring-Bear-of-Red River" into Willie Smith? —(Chicago Record-Herald.)

SIDE-TRACKING THE MAIN ISSUE.

Mr. Lodge undoubtedly made out a good case from his point of view, which is also that of Senator Aldrich, against the Hay-Bond treaty, but in so doing he merely demonstrated once again the facility with which the spokesmen of high protection always make out a good case against the application of reciprocity to any specific commodity. But not a word did he say about tariff revision, the topic which, under pressure from the champions of the "Iowa idea," is destined to play an increasingly prominent part in Republican campaign oratory and Republican legislative programs. (Providence Journal, Rep.)

Secretary Root makes it very clear that no intention exists of bringing up the question at the next session of congress. That session begins in December next and sits during the months just preceding the start of the presidential canvass. And Mr. Root says that revision should be undertaken, if at all, only "when congress is as free as possible from the distractions and temptations of an active political campaign." Obviously, therefore, the purpose is to put over revision until 1905, and any amount of agitation within the Republican party over the "Iowa idea" will not avail to bring the administration, supported by the eastern wing of the party, to give to it any helpful recognition, at least before the presidential contest has been fought and won.—(Springfield Republican, Ind.)

OUR PRESENT RECKLESS PACE

Everywhere the drags are off, and the wheels of commerce and society are running wild. When the stoppage will come, as come it must no one can tell, but this current of extravagance in living which New York has been following, especially for the past five years, is bound to end in catastrophe moral and social, unless common sense interposes. Already the shrewd, hard-headed men in Wall street are scenting the approaching danger from the commercial standpoint. They tell us that the limit of over-capitalization and bedding speculation is reached and the reaction, unless it comes gradually and under proper control, will spell panic from the Atlantic to the Pacific. One does not require the vision of a seer to recognize that the two most illiterate classes of society today are the object poor, who, by necessity must think of the needs of the body, and, therefore, can think of nothing else, and the idle rich, who by choice devote every hour of the day to the trivial problems of "what they shall eat and what they shall drink and wherewithal they shall be clothed."—(Dr. Lyman Mackay.

A NEW SLOGAN FOR DEMOCRACY.

The issue right there—it is in the "Iowa idea," the policy scornfully rejected by the Republican majority in congress and by the advocates of gone-daft protection. Suppose the Democrats should be shrewd enough to take up that idea and push it for all it is worth, would not the issue be clear enough? As expounded by Governor Cummins and Senator Dolliver, the "Iowa idea" means tariff revision all along the line, means numerous trailsters to the free list, the reduction of many schedules and the demolition of schedules that shelter monopolistic corporations. We believe there are several millions of Republican voters who hold that view. What is there in it that is anti-Democratic? What is there in it that Democrats could not consistently and honestly advocate? And does not that policy hold out the only chance for the Democracy to recruit its ranks from the Republican organization?—(Washington Post.

SHORT STORIES

Cannon's Fly Story.

Congressman Cannon the other day added another Illinois story to his already long string. He said that during a hot summer day he sought rest in a hammock beneath the scant shade of an old tree that stood at the corner of a down-state hotel.

"I had no sooner stretched myself in the hammock," said Mr. Cannon, "than these flies attacked me, seemingly by the million. It was intolerable, and in no pleasant frame of mind I looked up the proprietor.

"'What do you mean,' I demanded, 'by stretching your hammock in that fly-haunted field of torture you call a lawn?'

"'I know the flies are bad but there now,' he answered; but, Mr. Cannon, you ought to use the hammock during the hammock hours and you'll have no trouble from the flies.'

"'What are hammock hours?' I inquired.

"'From 12 noon to 2 p. m. daily,' he replied. 'During those hours flies will not attack you in the hammock.'

"I was much interested in the man's security, skill in evading the issue and, wishing to draw him out, I asked:

Bishop Huntington on "A Soft Gospel."

Several of the pastoral letters recently sent to the subordinate clergy by Protestant Episcopal bishops have been notable for their plain speaking. Bishop Lawrence's last Episcopal deliverance was not without pertinence in view of present municipal proprieties, and its consequent temptations. Bishop Clark of Rhode Island more recently has lifted up his voice in warning against the increase of gambling among those in high social circles, and notably among women. And Bishop J. D. Huntington of Central New York well known to the older generation of Bostonians, if not to the present and ruling generation, has made his mid-Lenten pastoral a characteristic philippic against the soft gospel which exalts God's love at the expense of His justice and which declines to say aught of fear of God, retribution and hell.

Bishop Huntington believes that there is a scriptural warrant for preaching hell; that when a man dies a rebel, a profligate, a hardened miser, a worldling, dies in his cushions and perfumes, and dies unforgiven because he gave some dollars out of a million to widows and orphans and universities," there is but one of two fates for him. "He must be put where he will feel his punishment inflicted by his Father in Heaven or else be thrown away as worthless material."

Retribution or Annihilation?

As for himself, he has no hesitation in saying that "a man of the world who never has claimed to be a believer, yet is a pew owner, who makes no secret of his convivial habits, who treats the church as contemptuously as he treats his social set, who does not pretend to apply the precepts or principles of the gospel to his business life or club life, drinks freely, swears profanely when he is provoked, if he goes occasionally with his wife and children to church, likes to hear sermons that flatter, whose creed is love for everybody alike, discredits rigid religious standards, disparages creeds and advocates open Sundays"—it is not surprising to the bishop that such a man should look upon himself as a Christian and be looked upon as such by others. Such a man, he says, is not a Christian, and he will be lost unless he repents and changes his course of life.

Bishop Huntington's views are somewhat different from those of Bishop Potter, who has declared that he does not believe that any man is lost. Bishop Huntington says he would rather be a decent atheist.

There are few more interesting figures in the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church than Bishop Huntington. His early and brilliant pastorate in Boston, his connection with Andersonville and with Howard college, his leading militancy for the Protestant Episcopal church, his audacious exercise of sacerdotal authority and his championship of it when it had fewer champions than it now has, and its pronounced sacramentalism, by all of which he has found himself at odds with much in his communion, and in the

MR. DOOLEY

ON [illegible]

By F. P. DUNNE

(Copyright, 1903, by Robert Howard Russell.)

"Well, sir," said Mr. Dooley, "I see be th' papers that th' American ambassadure to Rooshya has invinted a uny form f'r himself. It's a plain uny form but nice. A chapeau with a long graceful feather in it, a broadcloth coat very full in th' basque an' thrimmed with American eagles in good, vest iv th' same materyal pantaloons in pale blue with a dillycate goold shtripe four inches wide on th' outside seam, wan hip an' two side pockets, thirty eight chest, forty-five waist. Th' ambassadure will carry a handkerchief iv th' star spangled banner with th' rile arms in a corner an' will wear upon his shtiff front th' device 'E pluoribus unum, American' ambassadure's coat hooks.'"

"What does he want with a uny form anyhow?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"Well, it's a long an' a sad story," said Mr. Dooley. "Ben' with me while I tell it ye or do not an ye please I'll tell it anyhow. Ye see, in th' arly days iv this raypublic no wan cared what an ambassadure wore so long as it had pockets enough to carry away what he got in his beloved country f'r th' effort manufactures th' off wurruld. I've seen pitchers iv Benjamin Franklin who was that thick with Looey, king iv France, that he used call on him many hour iv th' day or night an' Benjamin Franklin's uny form was a fur cap an' a pair iv spare in thim simple days whin th' fathers iv th' raypuble wanted to send a man abroad to thrain a king they put their heads together an' picked out a good active thrustee, salesman kind iv a man. Th' father iv th' raypublic was mostly in th' fish thrade, business an' knew th' rap'ble men in thrade. Who'll we send to Francy?' says Thomas Jefferson. 'This here matther iv th' Louisyana purchase has got to be delicately handled or we won't get all th' best iv it,' he says. 'I suggest Obadiah Perkins iv Newburyport,' says Jawn Adams. 'Has he had anny diplomatic experyence?' says Puthrick Hinry. 'I want him sell a barrel iv tin-plate nails to a lady that comes to th' store to buy a pound iv sody crackers,' says Jawn Adams. 'He's our man,' says all th' others an' Obadiah Perkins got th' job.

"He packed a collar an' an extthra pair iv socks in a sea chest along a copy iv th' Westmin'ster Confission iv Faith, an' a tin-thruck full iv riference, provishioned himself with fine cut an' started out. At eight o'clock he landed in Paree at eight-eight he knocked down a court chamberlain an' a jawnydarum an' landed in th' lap iv Looey th' Magnifficent-but Tired. At nine o'clock th' monarch had given him a goold watch a jooled snuff box, a chapeau ringe an' a sword, had signed a threety an' was in th' Champ Elysee to th' American people who have or not it to this day an' was in the iv laughter over a story about Silas Cooper iv Salem which Ambassadure Obadiah had told him in th' purfect French he had picked up from th' cook in th' ship in going over. At'ther that Obadiah was all right. He had his feet undher th' king's mahogany iv'ry dhrawers an' on th' mahogany most iv th' rest iv th' time. He'd thry a jooced rockin' chair in th' palace an' taught th' French nobility how to rock without fallin' out. No wan cared how he dhressed. He attended th' choice receptions in a jumper an' leather breeches. He blowed in his pay check on a joolry an' leather breeches. He showed up th' next day iv th' nobility includin' th' king come in jumpers an' leather breeches. He blessed in his pay check on a watch that all th' French in creation could be seen blowin' into their tay. He won th' love iv all had ethnic him in good stand through th' hard winter in th' year an' th' greatest nobles in France took to wearin' th' clothes he'd bought out to make them look like th' Hat Obadiah which had become th' style. On which he wint away which he did not because he was unsuccessful but because he needed fresh air an' so he bowed to th' host he th' king an' all th' family.

"Thin wan th' modest days iv th' raypublic comes. It's different now that we've become a world power. Th' sufferin's is some iv our ambassadures on account iv their clothes. I was readin' th' other day in case iv th' ambassadure to Rooshya th' Honrable Charlemayne Tower iv Philydelphy, Pa. If I had that name divvle a coat wud scare me. I'd ask f'r no anny form. Th' name itself is uniform enough. Some names sound like overcoats, some sounds like a long coat on a rich man but Charlemayne Tower sounds like th' clothes a thrue knights dimplar wears. Ivry shoot wears at laste forty pounds iv epaulets on its shoulders. It's th' idea a name Gin'ral Miles wud like to wear f'r a uny form. If I had that name I'd go to th' palace in a fleet an' I'd have th' guards to fall down on their faces. But all th' time he was in Saint Petersburg Charlemayne Tower motored to get greatest fortune on account iv th' clothes he had on in th' clothes he didn't have on. He had a uny form. At court raypitions he looked like a prize fighter's man at a fancy ball. He was unable to perform anny iv th' graycet jootles iv an ambassadure. Ivry chapeau he blocked be his miserable attimpt. He was double dyed be th' fowlest iv diplomats who were entitled to put on glad bright things while they wint to see th' czar. Wan day he come rollin' up to th' palace carryin in front iv his simple black coat a most important thrusty. He had made manny attimpts to have this thrusty signed be th' czar but th' czar had always spurned him owin' to th' machinations iv Lord Ronald th' English ambassadure an' Vescont Boulbaze th' French ambassadure. Both these haughty ambassadures had a window dhress f'r a gint's furnishin' store f'r a valley an' when th' American ambassadure stood along side iv him I tell ye he looked cheap.

But this day Charlemayne he forgot was prepared to brave th' czar in his very throne. He rolled up in his carredge on th' manny road. When he got there th' ambassadure iv th' United States iv Ameriky was th' common. That is to say th' states. In th' kitchen dure with no wather be any. With th' milkers dure off. I did not be attempted to explain about the stiff on th' hats on him. I'm not sure that th' ambassadure iv the United States can thry on anny iv his clothes to thry on. I'm off th' hat an' to Shreyer who can come an' take a look at him so they fit him. He hasn't to thry on anny iv his clothes. He has no clothes. He has a uny form. All he has to do is to wear it. Whin he wears it he looks like a uny form. All he has to do is to wear it. Whin he wears it he looks like a uny form. All he has to do is to wear it. Whin he wears it he looks like a uny form.

Music Colony Life.

Mr. Hermann Klein has given in the April number of the Century Magazine a series of articles which he has called "Musical Celebrities." Mr. Klein is a prominent musical critic in London, and most of the world's figures in the world of music were his intimate friends. The first paper, "Seven Musical Celebrities," sets forth the author's personal recollections of seven well-known composers as Verdi, Wagner, Gounod, Liszt and Tschaikowsky. The later papers are to treat of famous singers, among them Adelina Patti and Jean de Reszke. Not the least interesting feature of these articles, so it is said, is Mr. Klein's gossipy talk on the mounting of grand opera; particularly so his recollections of the vicissitudes and triumphs of the late Sir Augustus Harris. It was while attending a rehearsal of a Drury Lane melodrama, which was being staged by his friend Harris, that Mr. Klein came across Lord Kitchener, then major obligingly drilling the supers for a martial scene. Among the many little anecdotes which go to demonstrate the personal character of these reminiscences may be mentioned the author's description of how he and Edouard de Reszke used to burlesque Wagner opera in the old days, for the benefit of the grinning and appreciative Jean. Mr. Klein has been an important, though modest, factor in the development of grand opera in England, and his advice was much sought both by impresarios and artists. Himself a musician of high standing, he was, after the death of Wejot Hill in 1898 made director of the opera class at the Guildhall School of Music, London. He is the composer of several successful songs. Charles Klein, a brother was the librettist of "El Capitan."

A Standard Dictionary for the Blind.

A striking illustration of the limitations of blind people is presented in the latest publication for their use, the first complete dictionary for the blind that has ever been printed in this or any other country. Some time ago the Maryland School for the Blind at Baltimore, secured permission of Funk and Wagnalls company to publish their Standard Intermediate School dictionary in point-print.

Some comprehension of the vast disproportion in bulk existing between books of the same content, one for the seeing and one for the blind, may be gained from an examination of the first of the 18 volumes. It is a lexicon of words beginning with A. In the small desk dictionary for the seeing, these occupy 35 duodecimo thin paper pages, in volume I for the blind, they fill 153 quarto pages of thick, tough paper, embossed with the point-print.

If these proportions were observed in transliterating into point-print the 308,000 words in the complete edition of the Standard dictionary, a library of at least 180 volumes, each the size of the Standard, would be required.

The Influence of Women in Colorado Affairs.

The April Pearson prints an able article on the work of women in Colorado politics. Referring to the work among the schools, the writer says:

"For the last eight years women have served as state superintendents of public instruction, county superintendents of schools, state librarians, and a few as city and county clerks, city and county treasurers. Almost without exception their administrations have been an honor to the state and a notice to the world that, given the opportunity and education that comes with responsibility, women may achieve success in any position to which duty calls them.

"The present state superintendent of public instruction, Mrs. Helen L. Grenfell, who has become a national figure in school work, is now serving her third term. She has had the enviable distinction of being the only state officer elected this year on the Democratic ticket. This emphatic indorsement by the people coming, as it did, from the united educational vote and from the members of all parties in the state, ratified the opinion of an ex-governor of Colorado, when he said 'Mrs. Grenfell is the best state officer Colorado ever had.'"

Subtle Charm of Indian City.

The charm of Calcutta works slowly and, apart from Government house and its garden, there is nothing which at once, rushing in as certain atmospheres do, fills the imagination, and there is nothing which by enchanting grace or romantic history at once stirs the mind. But the charm is the more enduring, perhaps, because it is so slow, so unassertive, so unobtrusive. Calcutta, in fact, may be compared with the subtle woman of history—Cleopatra, for instance—who leaves us wondering how they can have had the fates of empires and conquerors at the feet of men. Its founder, Job Charnock, was, we are told, "not a beautiful person, he was a block of rough-hewn British manhood, always a faithful man of the East India company." In the year 1690—more than 160 years after the Portuguese had first cast anchor in the Hooghly—Charnock, with 30 sullen followers, who confused the very name of the place with Golgotha, climbed the eastern banks of the three ruined mud huts which made up the cotton-thread bazaar of Sutanuti. Its swampy land slopes away into a forest path which led to the shrine of Kali—Kali the indefinable and obscene goddess of destruction, with a black face, three eyes (symbolizing the present, the past and the future), a long gilt tongue hanging out of her mouth, four arms, her clothing a garland of men's skulls. The forest path has been cleared away, the jungle and the marshes are now built upon, but Kali is still worshipped, goats and kids are sacrificed to her daily; men and women prostrated on the ground worship her till the priest closes the door of her temple each night. It is almost impossible to discover just what is felt about, and feared and it may be, loved in Kali. She is there, and she remains, with her history and her secrets and her power, eternally mysterious, eternally baffling, a world of symbols to the metaphysician, a menace to the ignorant, a reality to the despairing.—(John Oliver Hobbes in Collier's Weekly.

About Franchises.

In the March Atlantic is an important paper upon the question of franchises by George C. Sikes, who serves as secretary to the Municipal Voters league of Chicago which has accomplished such notable civic reforms. Mr. Sikes is unusually well qualified to deal firmly with this important question. His vigorous and reasonable discussion of the ways and means of reform should be read by every one concerned about the future welfare of our cities.

Canada's New Ocean Ports.

It is admitted on every hand that the terminal seaports of the Transcanada leave nothing to be desired. The harbor of Port Simpson is said to be the finest on the Pacific coast north of San Francisco. It has the additional advantage of being much nearer to Yokohama than either Vancouver or San Francisco. Nottaway on James bay, which is to be reached by a branch of the main line is the only deep-water harbor on the bay, and with some dredging might be used by vessels drawing 30 feet of water. The coast line of James and Hudson bays, tributary to this railway, will be about 4,000 miles. Chicoutimi, on the Saguenay, can be reached by vessels of any draught, and Quebec has magnificent docks which have cost the government millions of dollars, with deep-water berth and elevator facilities for steamers of any draught. The new bridge now building over the St. Lawrence at Quebec will enable the Transcanada road to make use of St. John and Halifax for winter ports if ever those of Quebec and Chicoutimi should be blocked by ice.—(From "The Transcanada Railway" by F. T. D. Chambers in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for April.

A Good One on Hoar.

Senator Hoar at the New England dinner in Philadelphia, talked about New England hospitality. "It is better now than it used to be," he said, "but it will stand improvement. I remember how I dined not long ago, with a Connecticut friend of mine. For my dinner there was turkey. It was an excellent bird and I ate heartily. I said: 'John this turkey will make a fine hash tomorrow.' 'Yes, George, it will,' the farmer answered, 'provided you leave off now.' That was not New England hospitality either. It was just a joke,' concluded Senator Hoar.—(Leslie's Weekly.

Newell Draws King Edward.

Peter Newell and A. B. Frost have both contributed characteristic drawings to the forthcoming number of Harper's Weekly. Newell has drawn an amusing caricature of King Edward VII. which is accompanied by the following historic bit of verse, also by Mr. Newell:

"I've been aboard a host of ships but never will one see Me enter in a pardner-ship again with Germany."

Summer Songs.

Katharine H. McDonald Jackson the author of "Summer Songs in Idleness" which will be published at once by Richard G. Badger, is a Canadian some of whose ancestors were Connecticut folk—Daytons, Coggswells and others of well-known names. Although descended from a literary family, and always herself imbued with a taste for literature, Mrs. Jackson has not, until the present time, seriously devoted herself to writing. She is the only daughter of his honor Herbert R. McDonald, M. A. D. C. L., of Brockville, Canada, judge of the united and surrogate courts of the united counties of Leeds and Grenville, and her earliest youth was spent on the shores of the river St. Lawrence among surroundings the natural beauty of which exercised a great influence over the studious child whose mind was ever open to the impressions of nature.

How the World Loves Sugar.

The average amount of sugar per capita consumed by the people of the United States in the years immediately prior to 1825 was about eight pounds. By 1870 this average had increased to 32 pounds, and in the year 901, this amount had more than doubled again, the exact figure being 68.4 pounds for every man, woman and child in the United States, or over eight times as much as the per capita consumption of 1825. Nor has this increase in sugar consumption been confined to the United States. It seems to have been equally rapid in other parts of the world, judging from the figures of total production.—(Leslie's Weekly.

The Stunning "Solitaire" Poster.

The book publishers seem to be running a race with their theatrical brothers in the matter of getting out attractive posters. The poster fiends looked only to the theaters or the soap manufacturers for their most stunning posters two or three years ago, but now the publishers are taking the lead in artistic results. The publisher used to modestly issue a card with big, ugly black lettering on it for the booksellers to display an announcement of a new book "just out." The bookseller's shop nowadays is a veritable picture gallery. One of the most attractive portfolios issued this season by any publisher is that put out by the New Hampshire Publishing corporation in the interests of George Franklyn Willey's immensely popular novel "Solitaire." It is gotten up in nine colors, and represents the strong, rugged, weather beaten, yet kindly face of the old man of the mountains, Solitaire himself. The face is a character study. The publishers offer to send it to any purchaser of the book, and they report that hundreds of requests are reaching them by mail daily.

"Lady Rose's Daughter" Dramatized.

It was inevitable that "Lady Rose's Daughter" would be dramatized. Arrangements have now been completed by Charles Frohman for its production next September in New York. The dramatization will be done by a woman, George Fleming, who in private life is Miss Constance Fletcher. Miss Fletcher dramatized The Light That Failed, the recent London success in which Forbes Robertson and Gertrude Elliott have scored.

"Gordon Keith."

Thomas Nelson Page's new novel, the first from his pen since "Red Rock," will make its appearance in May. There will be no serial publication. It will contain 500 pages and will bear the title "Gordon Keith."

The story is one of great scope, the scene includes New York City and Virginia, the period extends from the close of the war well into our own times, the characters are very many and greatly varied, the hero is southern, the heroine a New York girl, the plot is broad, full and interesting, the color has all Mr. Page's richness.

Divinity and Man.

The Putnams have in press a work by Mr. W. K. Roberts who has long been a resident of Hankow, China where he is an official in the imperial customs. Mr. Roberts' life in the east has evidently influenced him toward certain Buddhist theories, especially in regard to the common source and end of finite life. Besides much that is theoretical, this book contains a searching arraignment of the methods and morals of modern Christian civilization.

Our European Neighbors.

A new volume in the "European Neighbor" series will soon be issued by the Putnams. This work will treat of Danish life in town and country.

Besides an account of the government the book will contain sketches of the army, the navy, and the press. There is also a special study of Danish art including music, literature, and the drama. Hamlet, the most famous Dane, is not forgotten and several pages are devoted to traditions of his life at Elsinore.

Denmark is a small country, but its life, as revealed in this latest volume of the "European Neighbor" series, shows that its interest and importance are not in proportion to its size.

Easter Decorations That Cost Fortunes

EASTER is conceded to be the most brilliant of the many church festivals celebrated in American cities, surpassing even Christmas in lavishness of musical programs, extravagance of decoration, and point of attendance.

Millions of dollars are spent each year for Easter lilies and alleluias, yet paradoxically, the more wealthy the congregation, the less the money which is paid out by the treasurer. This is due to the general custom of making Easter Sunday the occasion of memorials to the dead. In fashionable churches like St. Bartholomew's, New York, where the Vanderbilt's worship, the floral decorations will represent several thousand dollars, but of this sum, only the potted plants are paid for by the committee in charge, and these are merely rented for the day. The flowers are sent by the Vanderbilts in memory of those of their family who have died in the church. Sometimes these memorials come in the form of set pieces, such as pillows, harps and other funeral offerings, but so skillfully are they arranged by the decorators that the work, when completed shows only an admirably massed chancel of green and white.

The work of decoration begins on Saturday afternoon and is generally in the hands of professional decorators and florists, assisted or hindered, as the case may be, by a committee of the church people. In the Episcopal churches, the committee consists of what is known as the altar guild, while in the Catholic churches the work is done by the sisterhoods. The ceremony is accomplished with much reverence, and those who make the rounds of the Catholic churches at this time have an opportunity to study the exquisite workmanship in the laces used in decorating the altars, which can never be seen during the crush of Easter Sunday. The finest laces owned by a church are reserved for the Easter services, and often the veils used to drape the figures on the various altars are worth a small fortune in themselves.

At the conclusion of the last service on Sunday the flowers are removed and they are sorted for distribution by a committee. In churches where guilds are formed to minister to the sick, these workers have first right to the flowers, and the rest are distributed by the various hospitals. The palms and ferns rented by the florists are removed on Monday unless the week following Easter is to be marked by a number of church weddings, in which case arrangements are frequently made for the decorations to stand.

A florist who has stores in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia states that fully $300,000 will be spent in chancel decorations in New York churches, $150,000 in Chicago churches, and as much in Philadelphia.

This includes all sorts and conditions of congregations, from the mission chapel where an expenditure of $25 or $50 is made only after most mature deliberation, to edifices like St. George's, where J. Pierpont Morgan will pass the silver plate for Easter offerings, and where the chancel will be completely hidden by lilies and azaleas at $5 a plant, hyacinths at half the price and cut flowers beside which the decorations at a ball or dinner sink into financial insignificance.

The Wealthy Church's Easy Task.

The wealthier the church, the more simple does the choir master find the problem of arranging the Easter music. His singers are kept up to the highest possible standard for every service, and he makes no special effort for Easter Sunday, except in an appropriate selection of music. So perfectly are his singers drilled for chorus work that the introduction of additional voices would injure, not improve, the ensemble work. Chorus singers in wealthy churches are paid enough to make their regular attendance an object.

Several of the fashionable churches have a harpist or 'cellist, or both, throughout the year, and these may be augmented by other stringed instruments for Easter, otherwise the choir remains as usual.

On the other hand, the choir master who is compelled to economize and stint the year around is expected to make more or less of a splurge on Easter. He is allowed funds to secure a noted soloist or two, perhaps a harpist. It is in regard to the latter that he has most trouble. There are not enough harpists in the average city to supply the demand for this great festival of music. They are engaged long in advance, and are paid a much higher figure than the soloists. A satisfactory soloist can be secured for $20 but higher prices are sometimes paid for "names." For instance, if a good light opera company is playing at one of the theaters, the tenor or basso may be secured for the Easter solos at a church. When a grand opera singer is heard, his or her solo is an offering, without money and without price to the church.

Where the choir master must reorganize his workers on a more elaborate scale for this one day, his task is arduous and involves long and tedious rehearsals, even though the music selected is of the lightest order.

In churches where boy choirs are employed the old English music notably that written by Sir John Stainer is selected as lending itself more easily to the choral style of the English church. If a choir master inclines to the work of American composers he selects the Easter music written by Horatio Parker, Arthur Foote or George W. Chadwick.

In the very large edifices in the larger cities, and especially in New York only those well in the front hear the Easter sermon, for there is a perpetual stream of sightseers, coming and going. To the individual accustomed to life on the European continent, this floating congregation is quite a matter of course, but to the American accustomed to the congregation's remaining seated during the entire service, the peripatetic throng seems distinctly irreverent.

LILIES.

(By Emma H. Van Deusen.)

Lilies, lilies, fragrant lilies,
How ye cheer my lonely hours
Blossoming in stately beauty
Peerless mid a wealth of flower.

To my heart ye are the dearest
Of all blooms that deck the earth
Waxen in your snowy pride
Symbols of the heavenly birth.

Lilies, lilies, precious lilies,
Do ye know what joy ye bring
To the weary soul grief laden
Pol'ove a token hungering?

Sweetly is your fragrant message
Wafted on the summer air
Of the Master's loving presence
And His ever-watchful care.

—The Pilgrim.

An Easter Comedy

Having balanced his books for the past year, Mr. Whichley in those mellowing tones at times assumed however unjustly, by even the best of husbands informed his wife that they simply must economize. Mrs. Whichley dutifully acquiesced and started in to reduce the rent expense. This was received with such a storm of complaint by her husband, over the quality of the meals he was getting, that she was fain to change back to porterhouse and experiment along other and different lines.

The approach of Easter suggested to her a grand opportunity. Although the Elite millinery store possessed exactly the hat that she coveted and ought to have, she determined that she would trim for herself and thus would effect a saving.

Still, what a deal of a hat this one was, displayed so invitingly in the show window. The moment she laid eyes upon it she knew that she had met her affinity. It was marked nine dollars.

Sundry times she lingeringly passed the store, and did not venture in. At last nevertheless knowing to a dot how sweet the hat would look on her, "just for fun" she slipped in.

Yes, it was all that she had imagined it could be. She wore it before the glass and surveyed herself at all angles, while the milliner's assistant went into transports of rapture.

They agreed that the hat was a genuine vastly becoming. But firmly resisting honeyed overtures to have it sent up, full of mingled regret and virtuous self-denial Mrs. Whichley left, and with sorrow the saleswoman replaced the treasure in the window.

Of course, Mrs. Whichley might have purchased a cheaper hat, however, also "of course" all the cheaper ones seemed absolutely hideous. She would do her own trimming and make something which while being cheap would be satisfactory too.

First she bought a covered frame. Considering that she intended it to last for several seasons plainly it was economy to buy something pretty good and in a department store she picked up a bargain at only $2.70—marked down from $3. Velvet and a rosette and other fixings amounted to 98 cents, and as she was going out of the door she espied an unusually pretty, tasty buckle or clasp, formerly $1, but now reduced during a special sale to 89. Economy dictated that she seize the chance and save money by investing, so she purchased the clasp.

When, at home, she began to trim the hat after all her material seemed rather meager. The frame appeared so big and the adornments so insignificant. She was in despair, but she worked away for a couple of days doing her best.

Mr. Whichley asked her casually what she purposed regarding a new hat for Easter, and she told him that she would make her old one answer. She dropped not a hint concerning her project she counted upon surprising him.

Well her best was not good enough. She needed more material. An ostrich plume—the hat she coveted had an ostrich plume would be precisely the thing—and ostrich plumes cost money.

She made frequent trips down town, each time passing the window where reposed the gem. When it suddenly vanished from its pedestal and was no more, she experienced a genuine feeling of relief, even though some other woman was now the happy owner of it. And impelled to recklessness she went and invested in an ostrich plume at 1345. It was worth $4, and it would be available for service on a succession of hats, thereby "twas economy in the long run, to buy it."

This ended her expenditures. She figured up and was a bit scandalized to find that she had spent seven dollars and ninety-nine cents—not so scandalized, however, as she would have been had she spent nine dollars. Anyway, she had saved over a dollar, and she was proud.

For days and days she labored to trim her hat to suit. Somehow, her knack failed her; she could not arrange the thing to approach anywhere near the effect of that creation which she raved at the milliner's.

It was the eve before Easter, and she was miserably putting in the final stitches, in a hurry to be done before her husband came home, when there was a ring at the door, and a hat-box was left upon the threshold.

Now if there is anything that a woman loves to open, it is a hat-box. Feverishly Mrs. Whichley untied the tape, and lifted the lid. Beneath in the midst of tissue paper, what do you think she saw?

She lifted it, and gazed with bliss and astonishment. She examined the address. 'Twas her name, plain as plain.

How dowdy her home-made monstrosity looked, beside this beauty. Oh, dear, the beauty must go back, some mistake had been committed.

On the instant her husband entered.

"Hey!" he exclaimed boyishly. "It's arrived, has it? How do you like it?"

"Did you have this sent up, Henry?" she queried, amazed.

"Certainly," he smiled. "You see, I decided that you ought to have a new hat after all, so toward you for trying to get along without. And so I dropped into a milliner's shop, on my way to the office, and told her what I was planning. As luck would have it you had been in before me and had gone into high jinks over this contraption, but had thought you didn't afford it. The milliner told me I was one of pleasing you. I saw $15 but he gave it to me for $10. I'll have it sent up until it's time to dress for church. All right?"

Mrs. Whichley, who had begun to sob she wished to explain, but she was choked and wanted to save me trouble and he had blundered [illegible] How like a woman—how like a man!

But the hat, the hat which no one might have acquired for nine dollars, which he had bought for ten, and which had virtually cost them both eighteen. How sweet the hat would look on her, and with her husband delightedly watching, she stood it before the hall mirror.

A WIFE'S CONFESSION.

How a Girl's Strategy Won.

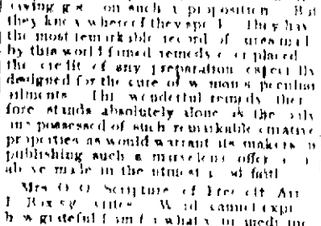
Of course every one knew when they were engaged and every one pretended to be surprised when they heard it was suddenly broken off. It was first said she had broken it off, then that his heart had changed, but finally she confessed that she had been so irritable, so depressed and blue that she had fairly driven him away. Her good looks were vanishing. She was getting thin, pale, and hollow-cheeked, with dark circles around her eyes. Suddenly all society was pleased again to hear of the engagement being renewed, and it was not long before a beautiful and radiant bride was taken to the altar. She had regained her good looks, her former happy disposition and strong nerve all through a secret a friend gave her. A wife had confessed to her that she had almost driven her husband to suicide with her bad temper, her nervousness and irritability and she had found that it all developed from a weakness of the womanly organs. A few months treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription completely changed her, she had cured herself and again made her home happy. A few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is what made two more lives happy and a radiant bride more beautiful than she had ever appeared before.

Normally a woman should be a source of comfort so far as feeling of distress is concerned, at each recurring period. But modern civilization has added its countless millions of ever present suffering to a large proportion of American women. The majority of such cases are due to local inflammatory or congested conditions which can be overcome by the right treatment. Of course, this local irritation is followed by headaches, backaches, nervousness irritability, and, indeed, often results in nervous prostration or collapse which might have been avoided by proper treatment.

As soon as the organs essentially feminine get out of order or a catarrhal condition exists, this disturbance is telegraphed throughout the whole system by the sympathetic nerves and the woman will suffer from pain in head and extreme nervousness. In all such cases an aggravating feature is usually [illegible] constipation, and this should be corrected by the use of a good vegetable laxative just previous to the time for recurrence of the pains. The local disorder and inflammation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically. Doctor Pierce has advised his 'Favorite Prescription' as many times in the diseases peculiar to women that he knows it's an unfailing remedy in most of the disorders of the sex. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in a form that would make it easily procured and ready to use. It is not like the usual patent medicine for it contains no alcohol—nor does it contain any narcotic, and it is purely vegetable.

ADVICE TO MARRIED WOMEN.

It is an evil day for the wife and mother when she scans her worn face in the mirror and asks the question "Does it pay? Does it pay to sacrifice health and happiness to wedded love?" But there is another question which rightly takes precedence of Does it pay? It is this "Is it necessary to sacrifice health and happiness to wedded love?" Half a million women answer "No!" They have been weak and have been made strong by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. They were sick and "Favorite Prescription" made them well. It will do the same for almost every woman who gives it a fair and faithful trial. It stops weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves and encourages the appetite.



Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and [illegible] cures of [illegible] other [illegible] and kindred weaknesses [illegible] Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription [illegible] legal [illegible] Dr. Pierce has [illegible] confidence [illegible] to [illegible] cure. All they ask [illegible] reasonable trial. Their [illegible] offering goes on such a proposition. But they know whereof they speak. They have the most remarkable record of unequaled by this world's famed remedy or [illegible] the credit of any preparation especially designed for the cure of women's peculiar ailments. The wonderful remedy therefore stands absolutely alone as the only one possessed of such remarkable curative properties as would warrant its makers in publishing such a marvelous offer as is also made in the structure of faith.

Mrs. O. O. Scruggs of Decatur, Ark., Box 95, writes: "I cannot express my gratefulness for what your medicine has done for me. I really do feel as though I was entirely cured. I suffered with inflammation of womb, also suffered severely with dyspepsia and was run down in every respect. I [illegible] for [illegible] several years and [illegible] until about seven months ago I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and also his Golden Medical Discovery, and [illegible] I am truly well. I can [illegible] my friends to [illegible] Dr. Pierce's medicine. I [illegible] in new work [illegible] and shall ever feel grateful to you and shall always recommend your medicines to all who are suffering in any way."

"I feel it my duty to write a few words that may be of help to some sufferer," writes Mrs. Minnie Richmond of Hopper's City, Mich. "For years I suffered with weakness and doctored with several physicians, receiving little help. Two years ago I was taken so bad that I could not do my work. Went to a doctor and he said I had ulceration of womb. I doctored for months but got no better, then wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., for advice. I followed his directions and after taking his medicines (three bottles of Golden Medical Discovery, two vials Pleasant Pellets and using one box of Dr. Pierce's Pellets) was cured. I would say to those suffering consult Dr. Pierce, it cost [illegible] little compared with expense of other physicians and his treatment will do as much good in one month than others can do in one year."

If you are led to the purchase of Dr. Pierce's Prescriptions, because [illegible] remarkable cures do not accept a substitute which has none of these cures in its record.

Some Thoughts of Eastertide

Edited by ELLA CELESTE ADAMS

[illegible] to the [illegible]
[illegible] in brown [illegible]
[illegible], with many of these [illegible] Lord
[illegible] of prayer.

I [illegible] will not forget
If God [illegible]
[illegible] in his first sight
Were [illegible] rich and rare.
Had they [illegible] given to chase [illegible]
[illegible] no Easter day.

[illegible] excited to colors dark
And left their parts to play.

Go to the [illegible]; his lesson hope!
He gives a coat of white
[illegible] Baby's breast; who see doeth
[illegible] of day a [illegible]
Go [illegible] his heart rejoice,
[illegible] her Child to pray;
[illegible] dust her Christ, tho' dead, still [illegible] Easter day.

I see in the equator, filth and dirt,
Your [illegible] rich and rare;
They will protect their mortgage straight,
Ryle "lets" you would not dare;
God will climb through their gutter,
The [illegible] he would give:
"Lo, I will be with you always;
Though I was dead, I live."

THE Easter-tide is as old as the heart of man, as the heart of nature out of which man was born." So, one and all we extend a happy greeting in honor of the return of the goddess of hope. "The Easter lilies," with each recurring year, by their sweet benediction strengthen each's hope of immortality, until it is a "living urge" that causes everyone to sing, to laugh and to work, with "brave heart and happy face."

"Full blown, behold them in their silvery ranks,
Near the murmuring streamlet's mossy banks,
Pure chalices of perfume and sweet dew.
Uplifted to the Easter skies' clear blue.
They shed such radiance of love and peace,
Thoughts inharmonious and selfish cease:
Uplifted, rapt we catch the winnowing
Of some bright seraph's overbrooding wing.

For holy are the pathways where they spring,
They bear the message of his love divine,
Of light, the herald and of hope the sign.
Labor in dust the roots of life be set,
Still, O soul, above earth's care and fret,
Give thou a garden of thine own small place,

An Easter Message.

In the glad Easter time one is led to reflect upon the [illegible] for those who [illegible] a hope of freedom from the bitter pathos of a lone, unsympathized existence, to the grandeur of a sublime mission fulfilled, a divine promise achieved.

To the toiler, then, there is an Easter message in the eloquent words of Henry Van Dyke:

"Make me respect my material so much that I dare not slight my work. Help me to deal very honestly with words and with people, because they are both alive.

"Show me that, as in a river, so in writing, clearness is the best quality, and a little that is pure is worth more than much that is mixed.

"Teach me to see the local color without being blind to the inner light. Give me an ideal that will stand the strain of weaving into human stuff on the loom of the real.

"Keep me from caring more for books than for folks, for art more than life. Steady me to do my full stint of work, as well as I can, and when that is done, bless me, pay me what wages thou wilt, and help me to say from a quiet heart, a grateful amen."

The Western Slope.

The Easter tide comes as a blessed gift to each one of us. We need the Easter thought of joy for "Every man is a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief." Joy and promise comes to us, a lesson to be well learned to last far around to the next Easter tide—with the holy mother of old to look into the tomb where we are accustomed to think our holiest, choicest treasure lies and receive the blessed assurance, "He is not here: He is risen."

These thoughtful and suggestive lines from "The Western Slope," the latest work of Celia Parker Wooley, are written for those whose enjoyment of life is in the retrospect:

"Where the lengthening shadows grow,
Stretching far behind;
Where the footsteps slowlier go,
Thought and impulse calmlier flow
From a quiet mind.

West and east are but a name;
Onward press my soul:
Morning's colors are the same,
Love and life yield not their claim;
We shall know the whole."

It is a "down-cast view" that the writer owns when she says: "It is a chastened rather than a buoyant frame of mind that prevails on the 'Western Slope.'" Still, as she takes a general survey of the western slope of life, as the sun slants towards its setting, she says: "The afternoon is a pleasant time of day, and invites us to a mood as ample and leisurely as its own wide and cheerful landscape, a reflective mood, a good one in which to sum up benefits."

Women's Daily Paper.

An afternoon daily newspaper, run exclusively by women, to be called "The Daily Bulletin," is what Chicago announces for the near future, says the Union Signal. Nearly all of the $100,000 necessary for the enterprise, has already been subscribed. The paper will be distinctively a newspaper, covering the different classes of news. In outlining the policy of this new venture, Dr. Frances Dickinson, one of the promoters, says: "As to crime, we shall publish news of that character, but it will be written from a scientific standpoint. None but doctors who understand the causes of many crimes will be assigned on such subjects." Higher wages are promised to the staff than most Chicago papers are paying today. Here will be an opportunity for woman to show what she can do in the business world, for her environment is that of a typical American city distinguished for pluck, and indomitable courage.

A Great Age for Beautifying.

It is the hardest thing under the sun for me, a passionate lover of loveliness to say an honest word on this subject. There are yards and yards of moralizing I could string out; but I have a conscience in existence, and a reputation to build. I that fall a victim to every beautiful contour I come across, every perfect profile, what heartfelt words can I say to those lacking in contour and profile? Until the inspiration comes let me bring to your notice something the universal guide, Shakespeare, wrote: "A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; a curled pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow, but a good heart is the sun and moon, or rather the sun and not the moon, for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly."

Isn't much of that out your way of saying beauty will fade? And what a great comfort is it to an ugly girl to be told that sometime, say 15 or 20 years hence, her beautiful companions will not be so beautiful as they are now. I think it would be a pretty mean girl that would take joy in contemplation of such a thought, one so mean she deserves to remain ugly all her days. Ah, the inspiration arrives! I have it. There need be no ugly girls, writes Katherine Pope in the Pilgrim.

This is a great age for beautifying. I say it earnestly, truthfully, with none of the claptrap intent of the advertiser. This is an age of physical culture, when the erstwhile neglected body receives some of the attention it's due. The colleges where women obtain their training do not today exalt the mental at the expense of the physical as once they did, in fact as all colleges were wont to do. Girls are not now encouraged to the intellectual droop of the book worm, but have held up to them as ideals the full-chested, outdoor type of femininity. And these school girls set the pace for the rest of us.

They are taught how to walk, how to sit, how to stand, and all about an erect, trim maidens that inspire others to emulation. They go in for robustness and rosiness rather than pale intellectuality; and the oxygen that they are so greedy after gives them roses and lilies that water will not wash away. We are driven to ask: "Where are the ugly girls of yesterday?"

I say that today if a girl is ill looking it is very largely her own fault. I do not assert that a fright can be transformed into a Venus, but I do believe she can be changed into a tolerably comely woman. Has she a bowed back, stooping shoulders, no distinction of carriage? Hie her to a physical culture teacher at once, and let her take cheerfully the strictest of criticism and drill. The towns are full of these teachers, but if your particular town lacks in this respect, get up a class and send to some training school for an instructor. If you cannot hire a hall, take a big airy barn for your gymnasium. You need almost no apparatus; a capable instructor and a willing mind are the chief requisites.

Women's Occupations.

Women's entrance into commercial life recently occasioned an observer to wish that all women would return to the occupation of their grandmothers. The speaker forgot the rule that two bodies cannot occupy the same place at the same time, says the Congregationalist. How can women return to occupations which are pre-empted by men? Spinning, weaving and knitting, once women's occupations, are today universally in the hands of men; there are men dressmakers, men clothiers; the bakeshop man has largely supplanted the home breadmaker; the laundryman the washerwoman. Meanwhile the chef dominates the kitchen, and frequently draws a larger salary than the presidents of our leading colleges. A single creamery in California habitually turns out 1,200 pounds of delicious butter in one day, the proprietor having little more to do in its manufacture than to regulate his automatic machines. Had one of our grandmothers lived to the present day, and spent all her time skimming cream and laboriously working the handle of her churn, she could not have made so much butter as this single creamery turns out in any month of the year. Places are ceasing to be a matter of sex. Who does the work best, to him or to her the work gravitates. Is not this the whole situation in a nutshell?

The Defeat of the Suffrage Bill in Kansas.

The Topeka Herald says, editorially: "The defeat of the suffrage bill in the house, while not wholly unexpected was accompanied by some surprises. It was surprising that a majority of the members could be induced to vote against a measure when its opponents were unable to present any better reasons for its defeat than were given by those who spoke against it. It should be an encouragement to the advocates of woman suffrage when those who oppose it are reduced to the extremity of rising in their places and making as a serious argument against enfranchising women, a plea that it will interfere with the womanhood and motherhood of the land for women to spend 15 minutes each year in expressing their choice of men who shall fill the offices which govern them as well as the men.

"Did anyone ever hear such commyrot, except from the old-fashioned man who absorbs his information from the corner grocery, and who is still doing business on the prejudices of his grandfather? Such argument would lead men to believe that most men spend the greater part of their time in exercising the duties imposed upon them by suffrage. But, as a matter of fact, only a very small per cent. of the men do anything of the kind. It may be argued by this old-fashioned man that he spends much of his time in finding how to vote intelligently. If so, the women have a right to remind him that the stupidly senseless way of conducting public affairs, too often apparent, would indicate that the more he studies the case, the less he knows about it. Men, who in the pride of superior sex, think they know more about the real questions which underlie public matters than women of the twentieth century are men who are ignorant of what women are doing to enlighten themselves. The women of today are proving equality of intellect by taking the highest honors in all the institutions of learning in the land in direct competition with men. By means of her study club and other avenues of information which are now open to her, the average woman is becoming better posted as to the moral and political needs of the people than a majority of the men who exercise the right of suffrage. And what is more to the point, and of much greater importance in the consideration of this matter, is that, once shown the path of duty she will conscientiously walk in it as she does that of private duty, in perfect harmony with the high ideals of womanhood and motherhood so much praised by those anti-suffrage orators. When as much can be said of man's devotion to the high ideals of manhood, brotherhood and fatherhood, then, not till then, may he assume to speak of woman as liable to be degraded by the exercise of any duty which he may perform without the danger of degradation.

The 5-year-old daughter of a California family has a habit of occasionally wandering in her prayers said just before she retires for the night. A few nights ago she finished "Our Father" with credit, but stopped after the opening line of "Now I lay me down to sleep."

"Go on, daughter," said her mother.

The little prayer ended "God bless father," and the rest came after a short pause.

"Well, dear, you haven't prayed for yourself," said the mother.

"Oh, No! Well, then, God bless me and make me absolutely pure, like Hunk's baking powder!"—(Selected.

Fibroid Tumors Cured.

A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied; and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write for fuller information about her illness. Her gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so genuine and heart-felt that she thinks no trouble is too great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly is it said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

35 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

...A SCHOLAR...

BY ELIZABETH KYLER

"Edward, sit up straight in your seat, and pay attention to your lesson." It was the teacher's voice that broke in harshly upon the little performance in pantomime. The teacher, Miss Natham, was tall, nearly six feet, and had a deep voice like a man. It was impossible for any little game to go on long without her finding it out, and she seemed to be able to see with the back of her head as well as the front of it.

On this occasion Edward had only been entertaining Florence, whom he dearly loved. Florence had golden hair and violet eyes and Edward thought her the prettiest girl in school. So he had thrust his thumb between his left and third finger inserted two of the buttons between his first and [illegible] fingers, tied his handkerchief around his fist and there he had the [illegible] old woman living.

To make this quaint old woman bow her reverence, wiped her nose with the corner of her shawl and made her perform all kinds of antics.

Florence was greatly amused and delighted, and it was while they were in the height of their enjoyment that they were rudely interrupted by the teacher.

Edward's face fell, as he took the handkerchief off of the little old woman's head and picked her black shoe button eyes out and put them in his pocket.

Florence bent over her book, but glanced across the aisle frequently to offer as much sympathy as looks could express. She had on a new pink gingham dress, that afternoon and looked even lovelier than usual. It was a [illegible], sailing day, and the windows [illegible] thrown up as high as they would go. It was the day before Good Friday and the children were thinking so much of the holiday they were to have the next day that it was hard for them to keep their minds on their lessons. At last [illegible] came and they all dismissed with. As soon as Ned entered the schoolyard he saw but the teacher called him to the yard, he was greeted by one of his many mates who danced and [illegible] shouting so everyone might hear, "He's got a girl. Ha! Ned's got a girl. Treat your sweetheart, Ned." "Shut your mouth, Pilet, or I'll make you," said Ned. Pilet pretended to become [illegible] and [illegible] it in a game of marbles [illegible] on close by; but he had heard the remark about him about his girl [illegible] well and [illegible] Ned let him [illegible] of the [illegible] Florence [illegible] the dinner or walk [illegible] that [illegible] at home.

As they [illegible] the porch, they [illegible] their and saw a little dog [illegible] toward them. Ned was very fond of dogs and coaxed the little fellow into the house. He was a [illegible] with a naturally curly tail and very [illegible] disposition.

Ned [illegible] as fast as the ball [illegible] him. "Oh, papa," he called, "It's Florence Dudley's little Punch. May I take him to bed with me?" said his father, "it is too late. You can keep him tonight and [illegible] him in the morning." A nice bed [illegible] for Punch in a box [illegible] the family all went to bed.

[illegible] days when [illegible] and bawling Punch was [illegible] be contagious. He quickly crossed the aisle, threw his arms around her and kissed her before she knew what was going to happen.

There was a shout of laughter from the other children, which was silenced by the teacher's stern voice, saying, "Go and report yourself to the principal, Edward." As he turned to obey he gave one glance at Florence. She was lying face downward on her desk, her face hidden in her arms and crying as though her heart would break. The laughter was all hushed at Miss Natham's stern command, "School, come to order," but most of the children could not keep their eyes from straying toward the sobbing Florence.

Meanwhile, as Ned climbed the stairs on his way to the principal, his knees knocked together in a very uncomfortable manner. He had a strong desire to turn and run the other way, but he kept on.

The principal was in his office and was scolding two boys for behaving badly in line. It made Ned shake in his shoes, for he feared something worse than a scolding was coming to him.

The boys were soon dismissed and sent back to their room. The principal then turned to Ned. "Well, young man, what have you been doing?" he demanded. Ned told him. "What made you do it?" said the principal. "I couldn't help it," replied Ned, trembling very much, and having a choky feeling in his throat. There was a twinkle appeared in the eyes of the man. Ned saw it and took hope. "Couldn't help it, eh?" said the principal. "Well, you won't do it again will you?" "I don't know," Ned answered, not willing to make a promise on that subject. The principal had a funny way of smiling out of one corner of his mouth when he was amused. He took out his handkerchief and blew his nose very hard, to hide the smile, then said in a gruff voice, "Well, go back to your room, I'm busy."

Ned drew a long breath of relief as he left the room, but he found when he returned to his own room that Florence would not look at him. He tried to attract her attention, but she looked steadily the other way. He put a note on her desk, but she brushed it off on the floor. At last he gave up in despair. She was evidently so mad, she would never make up again. On his way home from school he had a fight with one of the boys that tried to tease him about her, and that did not help his feelings any.

Two days passed, and it was the evening before Easter. Ned had been up-town with his father, and it was after dark when they returned home.

[illegible] dog quiet, or he will have to go out of doors." Ned got up and taking Punch in his arms, soon had him quiet. He then took the basket to his bedside, and placing Punch in it, patted and stroked him until he went to sleep, then turning wearily over in bed, fell fast asleep himself.

He may have been asleep a half an hour or more when Punch again began to howl. Ned was sleeping so soundly that it did not waken him, but Mr. McRay shouted out again, "Keep that yellow cur quiet," and Ned sleepily opened his eyes and patted and talked to Punch.

He soon found that Punch did not intend to be quiet for very long at a time. He took short naps all through the night, but would wake up howling every little while.

The family had little sleep that night, on account of the badly behaved small dog, and they were glad to see him carried away Easter morning in Ned's arms.

Ned rang the bell at Mr. Dudley's and Florence came to the door. She gave a cry of delight when she saw Punch, and called to her mother, "Oh, mamma, Ned has brought Punch home." Then she took him in her arms and kissed his little black nose.

She invited Ned in to see her Easter eggs. "Did you thank him for bringing Punch home?" asked her mother. "I forgot to," said Florence. Then turning to Ned she said, shyly, "I thank you very, very much for bringing Punch home. He was lost all day yesterday, and we thought someone had stole him. She picked out three of her prettiest Easter eggs and gave them to Ned, "You mustn't give me the prettiest," he said, but she insisted and would not be satisfied until he had put them in his pockets.

At the dinner table that day Mrs. McRay said: "Well Ned, has your letter offering to Florence made you friends again?"

"We're better friends than ever, now," he replied.

EASTER DAWN.

[illegible], by budding leaf
And flower unfolding bright and brief,
We mark our Easter Day's return,
While white the silvery tapers burn
And chanting choirs in full accord
Salute the reigning, risen Lord!

For going on, our life grows gray
In shadow of the passed away,
The things we had, and have not, seem
The fading vision of a dream,
Dear voices hushed, dear hands ungrasped,
Dear households broken, links unclasped
That late were binding kith and kin;
Such winds of sorrow have swept in
That wide, waste spaces everywhere
Leave empty silence, bleak and bare.
Not now with starry lilies dight
We greet the Easter's morning light.

Our lilies bloom beyond the tide,
Sweet fields are on that other side;
Here meet we pain and loss,
And heavy weight of rough-hewn cross;
When Easter breaks, thank God, we say,
For strength still equal to our day;
For hopes that span the road before
And love that climbs to heaven's door.
'Tis much, if but, serene and still,
We can accept the father's will,
And, comforted, uplift our psalm,
And feel, through tears, the Easter balm.

And now, by every lowly grave,
One tender thought our fond hearts crave,
That he whose outworn grave-clothes lay
Folded and fair on Easter Day,
May come so much our own to be,
That aye his blessed company
May light like sunshine all our gloom,
And make our Easter lilies bloom
In hearts that join with full accord
The anthems to the risen Lord.

The fact should not be lost sight of that the members of the Woman's auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian association who have carried the furnishing of the splendid new home to so successful a finish, are almost without exception, members of the Young Women's Christian association, and also interested in that organization. Therefore they are equally anxious to secure fully as good a home for the young women as the young men now possess.

Some of the less sanguine of the philanthropic women are inclined to entertain the idea that now it will be impossible for a long time to broach the subject of the needs of the Y. W. C. A. Not so. Like everything else, there is a habit, if one may use the unaccustomed term—even in the matter of giving. If a monied person donates liberally to one cause, keep watch—it is not long before there is another beneficiary. The joy of giving once experienced leads to a repetition of the delightful sensation; as with affection, so with giving.

"If it enrich not the heart of another,
Its waters returning
Back to their springs, like the rain, shall fill them full of refreshment."

Easter time is the birthday anniversary of hope. So let the friends of the cause rally and see to it that before [illegible]

EASTER TIME.

'Tis Easter time, 'tis Easter time!
Glad bells from all the steeples chime;
And why my happy heart replies,
My lady, with grave, downcast eyes,
Walks slowly down the sun-flecked aisle
A fair, sweet penitent—the while
I from my pew across the way,
Have dreams of heaven this Easter day.

I watch the faint flush shyly seek
Its rosy way from lip to cheek;
The soft lace on her pulsing breast
For brooding loves might be a nest.
O, Little Penitent, that I
Might shrive you as the years go by,
Your penance, Sweetheart, over this—

"MAN LOVELY" COLUMN IN NEW WOMAN'S PAPER.

Dr. Frances Dickinson Says the Daily Bulletin Will Have a Department to Offset the "Woman Beautiful."

A "Man Lovely" column, as a rival attraction to the "Woman Beautiful" department of the Record-Herald, will be a prominent feature of the Chicago Daily Bulletin, the new afternoon newspaper which is to be published by Chicago women under the lead of Dr. Frances Dickinson.

This announcement, made yesterday by Dr. Dickinson, was delivered with a relish which bodes ill for male fops and dandies who pretend that all interest in an attractive personal appearance is confined to the so-called weaker sex. Nothing was said as to what subjects would be used in the new column as a substitute for "complexion recipes" and "hair modulators," but it was intimated that there was more than enough masculine vanity in Chicago to afford a beauty expert constant occupation in answering its anxious appeals for help. Other features of the new publication were hinted at, which were said to be too novel to be fully disclosed as yet.

"The Bulletin will take an active part in local politics," said Dr. Dickinson. "Why shouldn't it? When papers edited by men don't hesitate to mix in woman's club matters. All the men's newspapers are too one-sided. We aim to give both men and women a fair show."

According to Dr. Dickinson the fact that women are the editors of the Bulletin will be shown in the paper's editorial policy and methods of management, and this will not result in the exclusive employment of women on the staff and working force. Applications are pouring in from men and women all over the country, asking for positions as reporters, editors or correspondents.

No date for the appearance of the Bulletin has been set, and no effort will be made to publish it until sufficient money in stock and advertising contracts has been secured to run the enterprise for the first six months. Dr. Dickinson said yesterday that requests for stock had been very numerous.

Incorporation papers for the new publication were sent to Springfield yesterday. The women named as incorporators are M. E. Bowen, A. S. Blount and F. Dickinson.—(Chicago Record-Herald.

The Latest Fashions

"ONE reason why I like tea, or, as they call it nowadays, 5 o'clock tea, 'high tea,' better than dinner is an inner," said the mother of a large family, "is that what makes a good tea would seem like a very poor dinner."

This excellent distinction might be applied to many things. For instance take artistic talent, says the New York Tribune. A poor artist may develop into a very excellent craftsman, and the talent which he not glorious often produces results that are distinctly good and sometimes valuable. If art students all over the country would take this fact to heart, and, after a certain amount of art study, would direct their energies and talent into channels wherein they might really excel, a golden age might be instituted, and matter of fact America might become as truly artistic as ancient Greece. Throughout all centuries, with the exception of the nineteenth, which has justly been called the age of inventions, needlework has occupied a position of recognized artistic importance, and it remains for the twentieth century to start a reaction from the stultifying effects of the machine work which with mechanical precision and marvelous rapidity turns out lace by the carload and embroidery or textiles that are painfully perfect. No wonder that the art of beautiful needlework languished and all but disappeared when machinery seemed to fill all requirements. The reactionary period which set in a couple of decades ago, when aestheticism ran rampant and the disciples of the new cult wore 'greeny yellowy' gowns and felt they must live up to weird ceramics brought crewel work to the fore, and the feminine world took it up with enthusiasm. One wonders what has ever become of the multitudinous pieces of splotchy so-called "realistic" embroidery that filled the drawing rooms and fancy work shops of that period. That this sort lived crazy for such an expression of artistic talent should not last was inevitable, as it was based entirely on a wrong principle. In the first place, the long loose stitches had no power of endurance, and one of the tests of truly good needlework is its durability, and, secondly, to be permanently pleasing it must be conventional, not realistic. The aestheticism of that period was so much ridiculed and was so unfortunately exaggerated that it undoubtedly retarded instead of helped the revival of artistic handwork, which, however, in the beginning of this century has again shown signs of renewed activity, and at this time it is founded on finer lines, and the arts and crafts including decorative needlework bid fair to flourish successfully.

Black Gowns Popular.

Many black gowns will be worn this spring, and extremely pretty effects are obtained by trimming the gowns with lace, and cutting the material away beneath so that the colored silk lining may show. An imported black etamine gown is extremely fashionable has the skirt and stole front jacket trimmed with bands of black yak lace. It is made over champagne-colored taffeta, the tint of the silk showing through the meshes of the lace. In addition to this effective trimming the gown is decorated with narrow bands of the self material embroidered in champagne-color silk threads. The skirt which clings to the figure over the hips but is exceedingly full below the knees, has the lower portion trimmed with a broad band of the black lace with narrow bands of the embroidered etamine framing it, says the Chicago Record-Herald.

The jacket is a short, collarless Eton, so short that at the back and the sides the waist line plainly shows. In front there are two long ends made of the wool lace, displaying its pretty colored silk lining. There is a double cape over the shoulders, but so arranged that it has more the effect of an epaulette than a shoulder cape. The sleeve is full below the elbow and trimmed with a band of the lace. This style costume is copied in various materials, and a novel idea is to use a lattice trimming of narrow black velvet ribbons in place of the yak lace. The same transparent effect can be produced, and very pretty results are obtained.

Shirt Waist Hints.

One clever woman in New York, who is disgusted by the extremely smart effect her shirt waists invariably have, offers the following valuable suggestion: "Don't line your shirt waists." It makes them bungling in appearance and difficult to launder; but have made every summer a couple of tight-fitting linings of fine linen dow-necked and short sleeved of course, and stiffened in every seam with featherbone slipped in the seams so that it can be taken out for the wash. This takes the place of a corset cover and gives one a smart, trim look to the fanciest and fullest of summer waists.

Waists that are almost solid with fine tucks and lace insertion are one of the richest of this season's novelties.

Quite as pretty as the lace trimmings, and even newer, are the fine openwork Irish embroideries decorating some of the handsomest of this summer's shirt waists. All sorts of materials, voile, canvas, linen, mull and organdie, are subject to this rich and novel finish. A pretty fashion for using the openwork embroidery with cream linen is to insert a square bib between rows of tucking, and to finish with lace insertion from bib to belt, the sleeve being tucked and banded to match. The stocks for the new thin shirt waists are nearly always of lace and never lined. The new double yoke effect, shown in illustration, is easily achieved by using this openwork embroidery. In this design the upper yoke is of embroidery, having the effect of a daisy pattern in coarse Honiton braid. The lower yoke is tucked and edged with an insertion in the daisy design. The unlined stock and wristbands are of rows of the daisy embroidery. The waist is of pale green linen and the trimming is in a deep shade of twine.

Conditions More Encouraging Now Than at Any Previous Time Since Whipp & Glenn Suspended Operations---Shipment From Lease on Ingham Ground.

Special to the Gazette.

Cripple Creek, April 11.—Conditions on the Pinnacle property are more encouraging now than at any previous time since Whipp & Glenn suspended operations there a few years ago, but the vein that the new lessees are working on is not the same as that from which Whipp & Glenn took but so much ore.

Pay Rock Mine.

Parties from Bull hill were yesterday examining the Pay Rock mine on Bryolite mountain, with a view of securing a lease. This is the only property in this section which has shown sylvanite at this depth. Specimens of this metal can be found at any time in the 75-foot level.

Negotiations are now pending for a bond and lease on the King of Diamonds. If secured, the parties will put on a steam plant and work the mine in a vigorous manner. This property has undoubtedly the best showing of any ground in the Gillett section.

Two plants of machinery were purchased in this city to equip the shafts of the Hawkeye and Great Western properties, both of which are located in the Gillett section of the district.

S. B. Stewart is preparing to start work on his properties near the Highland Chief and Mayflower. He now has in sight immense bodies of low grade ore, which he believes will greatly improve with depth.

J. H. Williams has secured a lease on the Boston & Cripple Creek properties, and work will be commenced on the ground the coming week on quite an extensive scale.

Ingham Shipment.

Hughes and associates who secured a lease on the Ingham ground some two weeks ago are already receiving a profit for their work, as yesterday they made their initial shipment of one carload of ore which was billed to the Argo sampler, and from assays taken it will run in the neighborhood of $40 to the ton.

The pay streak runs from 18 inches to two feet in width, and was first encountered near the 800-foot level where the lessees are now stoping energetically, and also doing considerable development work. Another shipment is being saved which will be sent out in the course of 10 days.

Work has been resumed on the Sunshine property on Galena hill near Cameron. The incline shaft is being widened and straightened, and it is to be lowered an additional 100 feet at once, when the work of thoroughly prospecting the vein will begin.

COLORADO SPRINGS MINING STOCK EXCHANGE

The mining stock market yesterday showed a slightly stronger tendency especially in the cheaper classes of stocks but in the mines the prices were practically unchanged with the exception of Isabella which sold up to 16 and closed at that price with light trading. Acacia was lower at 9 and C. K. and N. was unchanged at 18. Elkton held fairly strong at 36½ and Lexington sold at 4⅞ but Prince Albert was weaker at 3¾ and Work dropped to 6⅝ with a single sale.

In the prospect department the list was stronger generally and American Consolidated advanced to 3⅝ and Anta sold at 11½.

Keystone went up again, selling at 4⅞ and Gold Gold advanced to 4¾ on a single sale. Sunset Eclipse was fairly strong at 2⅛ and Rose Maud was in demand at 2⅝. Pollux was traded in at lower prices 1½ being the price at which the sales were made. In the miscellaneous department Navajo sold at $1.50 per thousand and Zoe at ⅞ per thousand shares.

MORE ABOUT THE GILSONITE DEPOSITS

William Weston, the well-known mining engineer, returned yesterday morning from a two-weeks trip to Utah, where he has been in the interests of eastern capitalists, looking up the gilsonite deposits around Fort Duchesne. Mr. Weston is making extensive reports on the various mineral resources of Routt county and the country in Utah tributary to the new Moffat line which is now in process of building.

Mr. Weston states that the deposits of gilsonite in that section which he has visited during the past 10 days are practically inexhaustible and that a supply for all purposes is available when proper transportation facilities will permit of profitable mining.

IMPORTANT BUSINESS AT WORK ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Work Mining and Milling company will be held at the offices of the company in this city tomorrow afternoon for the purpose of electing officers and listening to the reports of the operations of the company for the past year. The Marrying Parson of Illinois

The big lumbering farm wagon drew up at the horse block as the stalwart young farmer pulled back the reins and gave a "Whoa now," that could have been heard a quarter of a mile. The shy little country girl who sat on the seat with the young farmer started nervously and looked almost apprehensively at the white house standing on the edge of the town

"All right Annie" said the farmer, as he jumped out and hitched his team "I think this is the place." He called to a small boy skating on the icy sidewalk "Say, bub is this where the marryin' minister lives?"

"Yep," said the boy. "That's him sittin' in the window there in his shirt sleeves a readin

The young farmer and shy little country girl walked up to the house and knocked at the door A tall, kindly featured man with a long, gray beard opened the door He was in his shirt sleeves and carried a newspaper in one hand

The farmer and the young woman stood looking at him, evidently in much confusion But the man who had come to the door did not need them to tell him why they had come He knew, and he is not a man who stands on ceremony

"Glad to see you" he said, genially as he reached out to shake hands with the visitors I suppose you came to get spliced" Walk right in

If the young people had not known before they would have certainly known it as soon as they saw the gray-bearded man that he was Elder J M Haughey, commonly known as "the marryin minister" of Mason City, a thriving town near Lincoln Ill

"The beauty of my marrying Elder Haughey" was saying just before the arrival of the young farmer and his bride-elect is that I don't put on style, or use a long ceremony, or ask a lot of questions that should have been all put and answered at the time the engagement is made I don't believe in fol de rol or white ribbons or ushers with mittens on I use the shortest ceremony possible I simply say "

It was at this moment that the young couple appeared and Elder Haughey had the opportunity of making a practical demonstration of his way of uniting two fond young hearts

"Don't take your things off unless you want to sit down and stay awhile," said the elder Where is your license?" The elder took the license, glanced at it a moment and then bid the couple join hands

"Excuse my coat" said the older, "it's too warm in here Do you John take this woman for your wife?"

"Yes," said the young farmer, in a tone almost as loud as the one he had employed in saying whoa' to his horses.

"And do you Annie take this man for your husband"

"Yes," said the young woman timidly

"Then" said the elder, 'by the authority of the laws of Illinois I pronounce you husband and wife

The young couple gave a convulsive squeeze of each other's hands The elder's grandchildren a boy of 4 and a girl of 2 or 3 who stood wonderingly watching the ceremony thought it the proper place to applaud, and manifested their approval by pounding on a toy drum with a stove poker

Silence children!" said the elder. Then he looked over the silver spectacles that bestraddled his nose and said to the young couple who still stood before him as though in doubt as to whether the ceremony was concluded or not

I wish you joy and happiness in your new relationship He loving and true I would wish that sunshine would always shine upon you but in the sky above every one of us on this earth occasional clouds will come But remember always that God is above the clouds just so sure as he is in the sunshine May He bless you and keep you forever

The elder bowed his head and stood with his hands clasped for a moment Then he looked up and smiled and said "That's all

He shook hands with the couple and said Thank you" as the groom slipped something into his hand The newly married pair went joyously down the walk to their wagon, the small boy and his sister playing a sort of ragtime wedding march on the drum and a broken jewsharp

"That's all the ceremony I use" said the elder reflectively as he settled back into his chair I think it's enough What's the use of making them vow to love honor and obey" I might just as well ask the contracting parties if they will swear always to breathe and to eat food every day as long as they live as to swear to love and honor because it ought to be just as natural for them to do one as the other A man might swear before the minister at the wedding ceremony that he would love and cherish until he was black in the face but if he was the right kind of a man he would do it anyhow or else he wouldn't be standing there taking the woman as his wife The idea of asking a man and a woman to care for each other in sickness or in health' If I believed for a moment that that young farmer wouldn't take care of that pretty little girl as tender as could be whether she is sick or well I would have thrown him out of the house

The elder paused and wiped his spectacles reflectively The sanctity of a marriage rests not in the vows that are made at the altar but in the heart It is not what a man or woman declares in good firm voice at the altar, but it's the way they act toward each other afterward If a man loves the woman who stands beside him at the altar every act of his will avow it all his life long

After seeing Elder Haughey and hearing him talk the visitor would not ask why he was so popular at weddings He claims the distinction of having married more persons than any other man in Illinois, and he believes that there are few men in the United States who have married more persons than has he

All told he has united in marriage up to the present time 2,770 persons, or 1,385 couples and as he says he is 70 years young and in the best of health he sees no reason why he should not round out his record to the 2,000 couple mark Elder Haughey has been a preacher in the Christian church for over half a century and while the majority of those whom he has married have been members of the Christian denomination he has united persons of all sorts of religious belief Besides the great number of weddings at which he has officiated, Elder Haughey has conducted 1,502 funerals He has held various charges in the Christian church in Huron City and in the small towns round about

Most of his ministerial work has been of the circuit order, his pulpits being largely in school houses and in straggling churches rude affairs of boards situated in groves and out on the prairies of Illinois He hunts up communities that have been overlooked by the churches and organizes religious bodies there.

Elder Haughey also lays claim to some distinction as a newspaper starter. He moved to Mason City from Lincoln Ill., in 1881 and started the Mason City Sharpshooter In 1887 he published the News, until 1889 when he bought a paper in the little town of Hopedale called the Review. In 1891 he decided that "another long felt want" existed in Mason City for a paper, and started the Banner. A few years later the newspaper starting fever seized him again, and he started the Record at San Jose, and then a paper of the same name at Weldon. Between riding circuit, carrying on the various details of a minister's life, editing newspapers and jerking a Washington hand press, as he often did, especially in the sixties, Elder Haughey for many years ran a photograph gallery at Mason City, and did all the work—posing the subject, taking the picture and developing the plates.

All this time Elder Haughey was marrying people, marrying people, marrying people.

He married them while sitting at his desk in the newspaper office writing editorials on the preservation of the union He married people while standing at the case setting up the editorial he had just written, and he often married people while jerking away at the Washington hand press, running off the weekly edition of his paper. Elder Haughey married people while he was squinting through the camera leveled at the happy pair Elder Haughey married people in the churches, at their homes, at his own house and sometimes in the middle of a country road while he was circuit riding He has married children whose parents he had long before joined in wedlock He is now looking forward to performing marriages in the third generation

"I like to marry people," said the marrying minister "I would sooner marry people than eat"—(Chicago Tribune

Fewer Pelts from Maine.

For nearly twenty winters past I have made fur buying trips to Maine" said a buyer for a New York wholesale fur house and every trip makes the fact more apparent that the trapping ground there are growing smaller and smaller year by year Aside the natural causes to which this is due the trapping law now placed under such restrictions by the laws of the late that their field of work is limited even in the regions where it can alone be pursued with profit

When I began buying fur in Maine the trapper had a free field and could use on the public or wild lands of the state as well as on those belonging to individuals Now he cannot legally set a trap even if a muskrat or any of the fur bearing animals without obtaining a permit from the game commissioners

He cannot trap on individual tracts of the wilderness unless he obtains the consent in writing of the owners or the commissioners will not give him a permit to trap without such written consent As there are a great many private owners of land in Maine nowadays who will not allow trapping large areas of the best country for the trapper are forbidden him

The hunter cannot trap beaver at all unless he can obtain the written permission of the commissioners in addition to his license and I haven't heard of any instance for several years in which any such permission has been granted

The headwaters of the Androscoggin the Penobscot the Kennebec the St John and the wild regions drained by their numerous tributaries are now and have been for many seasons the chief source of supply for furs in Maine When the trapping grounds were within reasonable distance of Lewiston Bangor Auburn and other centers of civilization I traveled extensively through them bargaining for furs at the camps and backwoods settlements frequently purchasing as much as $10,000 worth in a season

For the past four or five years I have obtained my furs by previous arrangement with trappers for their season's work, the pelts being sent in to the various centers from the camps Last winter I could obtain but $1,000 worth of furs I do not expect to gather this winter a quantity even as large as that —(Bangor (Me) News

EASTERN MARKETS

CHICAGO GRAIN & PROVISIONS

Furnished by Otis & Hough, Bankers and Brokers, 127 Pike's Peak Avenue

Chicago, April 11 Wheat The market here was active and weak The government report indicating a crop of winter wheat of about 414,000,000 was extremely bearish but about as bad was expected Armour again occupied the center of the stage There is no question we think but that he made took to unload a lot of wheat The market simply would not take it and we doubt if he succeeded in selling any great quantity and think his long interest must still be very large At the decline which followed he was forced to support prices and the market closed fairly steady While such operations impart temporary activity to the market their ultimate and more permanent effect is to keep many traders out While the clearances were large there is nothing important in the way of cash business Broomhall predicts world's shipments 10,500,000 bushels and at Incomes on passage Private Paris cables are bullish on the French crop situation and suggest that they will require to import somewhere from 1,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels The visible supply will likely show a moderate decrease on Monday With one man up great a factor in the market predictions are not wise Estimated cars 30

Corn Market here was very quiet and steady Some vessels continue to leak with non union men but in the main the cash situation is still uncertain and slow There was a moderate commission house business today and nothing interesting in speculative operations Cables advices indicate a free early movement of Argentine corn Estimated cars 103

Oats The unchanged prices represent the condition of the market Very little doing Cash market is about steady and speculative operations small and featureless We still think July oats should be sold on bard spots Estimated cars 136

Provisions Market is about unchanged It was irregular during the day being affected somewhat by the irregular wheat market On the week spots there was buying by brokers which looked like Armour In the main however the business was slow

Easter Day in Jerusalem

[illegible] and praying and singing around the sepulcher on Easter morning.

All the week the pilgrims are busy seeking out the holy places of the city. They toil painfully up the Via Dolorosa to Calvary, stopping to kiss and tell their beads at each of the fourteen stations. They search out the Garden of Gethsemane, with its gray old olive trees. They find the house of Pontius Pilate and the hall reputed to be the prison into which the Roman governor thrust the Savior, and all the time there is a ceaseless play of local life and color through the streets.

Praying and Selling.

Cooking as well as praying is going on in the open air and at all times trading. Shrewd oriental venders line the streets, and the rugs of Bokhara unroll themselves beside the laces of Smyrna, and the dates of Arabia and a thousand quaint and characteristic bits of eastern handiwork, which in the shops of the occident would be costly trifles. To study the faces and costumes of the street merchants, male and female; to observe the different types, as yet untouched by the railroad or the public school, just as they have existed always in the heart of the east, is enough to absorb the interest without the ceremonials which are taking place every day. One of these is the washing of feet, in imitation of the act of Jesus at the last supper. The vast rotunda of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher is crowded for the ceremonial. The Greek patriarch of Jerusalem, always a stately and imposing figure, with the comeliness of the Greek face set off by his splendid vestments, removes one by one his silken robes, crusted thick with gems and gold thread. He takes off the magnificent jeweled miter, the great chain of gold wound around his neck, the great cross of blazing diamonds, six inches long. At last he stands forth clad in a simple white robe, in imitation of the poverty of Jesus.

He pours water from a gold pitcher into a gold basin and goes from one to another of the 12 priests who represent the disciples, and who have been busily getting off their shoes meanwhile. He washes a foot of each, drying it with a towel, and kissing it. The last of all represents Peter, and as Peter did, he objects to the Master's degradation in washing his feet. He refuses to allow the rite, stands up and gesticulates violently. The patriarch brings the testament and shows him the passage describing the original ceremony, and finally Peter submits amid the applause of the audience.

Descent of the Sacred Fire.

But the greatest ceremony of all is the descent of the sacred fire from heaven. The Greek branch still adheres to it, and the Christian tribes of Asia actually believe that the fire descends straight from heaven by a miracle, to light the torch of the patriarch.

The heavenly fire comes down each year exactly at 2 o'clock in the afternoon on the Saturday before Easter. The night before hundreds sleep on the floor of the great rotunda to secure good places for the ceremony. As the hour approaches on Saturday the rotunda is packed to the doors; the streets without are packed to the gates of the city. The marble sepulcher is dark and silent. The patriarch is inside alone. If there is a soft scratch of a match no one hears it. As the clock strikes two a light shines from the sepulcher. A shout thunders from the waiting throng. Heaven has sent the new fire once more. Those nearest the sepulcher pass their candles in at openings and receive them again lighted. They give the light to those next, and in the incredibly short space of seven minutes all Jerusalem has the fire. From there it spreads all over Asia Minor, running from village to village, and even along the shore of the Mediterranean and into the countries of Europe. So spreads the sacred fire from Jerusalem each year, even as the Christianity which it typifies spread before it.

Sick and Helpless, Come Unto Me

I Have Discovered the Marvelous Secret of Life, and I Give It Free to You.

My Words on Earth Are to Heal the Sick and Cure the Maimed—Come Unto Me and I Will Give You Health and Life and Youth.

My Vital Life Fluid, the Most Marvelous Curative Power Ever Discovered, I Lend to You Free for the Asking.

I have discovered the marvelous secret of life and I can make you live, for I can make you well, no matter what your sickness; I can make you strong and well, no matter how weak or crippled you are. With my Vital Life Fluid, the secret of which is known only to me, I cure every known ailment of the human flesh. Cripples rise from their crutches and walk away well and happy; the sick take up their cots and walk. There is no ill or ailment under the sun which my marvelous Vital Life Fluid will not banish, and it restores to the perfect ideal of health every poor and unfortunate sufferer.

I do not talk to demonstrate a theory, I have no use for that, for I am accomplishing facts. I am curing thousands who had given up all hope of life. I am bringing joy and happiness into hundreds of homes. If you suffer from [illegible] nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, neuralgia, blood and skin diseases, rheumatism, paralysis, dizziness, lost vitality, nervous debility, insomnia, blood poison, anemia, female weakness, and chronic, lingering or nasty diseases, boils, carbuncles, or any disease or weakness of the vital organs come unto me and I will cure you and make you well. I can do it, and cure you right in your own home. I have given the people of the whole world proof that I have the very power of life within me and my wonderful Vital Life Fluid will prove it to you. Thousands are living witnesses to the truth of my statements. My Vital Life Fluid is free to you and my services [illegible] not cost you one penny. I have no fees [illegible] I do not charge for consultation or for medicine. I will not even take your money for postage. I am not in this world for money. I am here to help humanity, to relieve suffering, to heal the sick and cure the maimed. Come unto me and I will give you health, and life and youth.

My Wife Discovered the Secret of Life and Cured Me. She Cures All Diseases with Her Marvelous Vital Life Fluid.

Write me a letter, a postal card or call at my office and I will tell you how you can get my Vital Life Fluid free. Don't delay, for every day you suffer is a day lost from your life. Don't put off writing me, for I have given the people of the whole world proof that my Vital Life Fluid will cure you. Don't be afraid to write me, for I will not publish your name or your letter. Don't be afraid to call at my office, for I have nothing to conceal. Don't be afraid to write me, for I have nothing to sell. Don't be afraid to call at my office, for I have given away thousands of dollars worth of my Vital Life Fluid and will give away thousands more. Don't be afraid to write me, for I will not ask you for money. Don't be afraid to call at my office, for I will not ask you for money

Make the Porch Comfortable

Sunshine is good. Also quite hot. You've noticed it particularly in connection with the front porch. But one must have the sun. Only necessary to screen the direct rays. This is possible with the Vudor Porch Shade. Made of the best Linden wood, weatherproof dyes and strongest twine. Soft colors make them restful to the eye. Their thin look much better than the old bamboo kind. Good reasons why you should have the Vudor. And even more so when you have a Porch Shade which is easy running. Iron pulleys and the best of cord make this sure.

SENATE JOURNAL'S RECORD OF ACTION

Points on Which Vetoes are Based---Governor's Signature Attached to Bills---Attorney-General Makes Unfavorable Report on Two Personal Appropriation Bills.

Special to the Gazette.

Denver, April 11.—The senate journal of Monday, April 6, was received from the printer today and shows that directly after Senator Ward's motion, early Tuesday morning, asking for a further conference on the eight-hour bill, a communication was received from the house, informing the senate that the lower body had adopted the report of the conference committee on House bill No. 433, the general appropriation bill. The journal shows that President Haggott announced that he was about to sign house bill No. 433. Senator Rush rose in his seat and protested on the grounds that the house had adjourned sine die. The president announced that he had signed house bill No. 433. Senators Ward and Rush gave notice that they would file a written protest against President Haggott's action, which they did, the senate journal showing that the protests were heard on the adjournment of the house prior to the reading of the bill publicly, the neglect of the president in not publicly reading the title of the bill, and causing it to be read directly before signing same. It is contended that the president's action was in violation of the constitution, and that the bill is therefore invalid. Should this contention prove true, the auditor would probably be held accountable for any money paid out on warrants issued on account of the general appropriation. This would be true, even should the governor sign the appropriation bill, which from present prospects appears probable.

Among the bills signed today are these appropriating $50,500 for the school of Deaf and Blind at Colorado Springs; appropriation of $90,000 for the Soldiers and Sailors home, and another of $80,000 for the Home for Dependent and Neglected Children. There was also an appropriation of $100,000 for the St. Louis exposition.

Forty-five Bills Signed.

S. B. No. 6, Torrens land bill; S. B. No. 213, certificates of indebtedness; S. B. No. 168, legalizing police courts; S. B. No. 39, ore stealing; S. B. No. 184, water rights; S. B. No. 78, procedure in civil action; S. B. No. 140, concerning water rights; S. B. No. 308, public revenue; S. B. No. 211, mine inspectors; S. B. No. 247, removal of fish hatcheries in La Plata county; H. B. No. 35, regulating employment of women and children; H. B. No. 140, making sheriffs fire wardens; H. B. No. 339, regarding transfers of property; H. B. No. 416, Adams county regulations; H. B. No. 304, South Arapahoe county regulations; H. B. No. 244, regarding adulteration of bee products; H. B. No. 188, insurance and guaranty; H. B. No. 233, irrigation; H. B. No. 382, irrigation; H. B. No. 93, changes of venue; H. B. No. 378, regulating veterinary practice; H. B. No. 266, $100,000 for St. Louis exposition; H. B. No. 264, relating to schools; H. B. No. 240, for protection of sidewalks and bridges; H. B. No. 419, union High schools; H. B. No. 239, assessments on transient stocks of goods; H. B. No. 117, amendment to homestead act; H. B. No. 195, for protection of birds; H. B. No. 146, liens on wells or work, labor, etc.; performed; H. B. No. 332, appropriation of $200,000 for the maintenance of the penitentiary; H. B. No. 438, providing that suicide shall be no cause for insurance companies to refuse to pay policies; H. B. No. 411, regarding duties of the state land board; H. B. No. 48, lighting switches by railway companies; H. B. No. 137, branding and marking live stock; H. B. No. 348, in reference to draining and reclaiming lands; H. B. No. 124, an appropriation of $60,000 for Soldiers and Sailors home; H. B. No. 20, appropriation of $50,500 for Colorado School for Deaf and Blind; H. B. No. 174, changing salary of state auditor to $3,000, (this raises his salary $500); H. B. No. 210, compel support of wives and children and providing penalties; H. B. No. 211, compelling support of parents by persons chargeable with their support, and providing penalties; H. B. No. 130, defining estray animals and providing penalty for not properly taking up and caring for same; H. B. No. 188, amendment to board of arbitration act; S. B. No. 286, commission of printing, providing for supervisor at a salary of $2,500 a year; S. B. No. 270, property rights of married persons; H. B. No. 150, appropriating $100,000 for Home for Dependent and Neglected children.

Among the bills which the governor still has under consideration are: Bill providing for election of board of trustees to control water works in cities of the first and second class, the game law bill, and the medical bill. The general appropriation bill has not been returned to him by Attorney General Miller, but it is expected that this bill will receive his signature early next week.

Two Adverses Reported.

When the attorney general was seen today, he said that he would make an unfavorable report on two appropriation bills as he did not care to change precedence. Several other similar bills have received unfavorable reports by former attorney generals because they were in violation of the constitution, which provided that no bill shall be passed giving any extra compensation to state employes, and that money cannot be appropriated by the legislature for charitable purposes. The two bills in question were passed by the Fourteenth general assembly, one being an appropriation of $2,000 for B. von Cohren, who in 1899, was overseer at the state penitentiary and was injured at the hands of a convict while in the employ of the state. The other appropriation was for $3,500 to be paid to Louis Bergonia who was ordered to perform labor of known danger by officials of the state penitentiary with the result that he was seriously injured. Attorney General Miller said he thought it possible that the governor would sign both bills and leave it to the auditor to refuse to pay the sum. The matter was then left to the court to decide whether or not such appropriations are constitutional. The attorney general holds that money can be appropriated by the legislature for injuries received while in the military service of the state.

World's Fair Board.

Under the provision of H. B. No. 220, which provides for the appointment of two additional commissioners for the board of St. Louis World's fair managers, Governor Peabody today appointed Mrs. Lionel Ross Anthony (Polly Pry) of Denver, and Thomas F. Walsh of Ouray members of the board.

In accordance with the provisions of H. B. No. 54, approved a few days ago, the governor today appointed the following persons members of the state board of stock inspection commissioners: A. N. Parrish of Lamar, Prowers county; L. B. Sylvester of Monte Vista, Rio Grande county; L. W. Bennett, Ft. Collins, Larimer county; Lewis Hommerle, Yampa, Routt county; H. F. Morgan, Arroya, Montezuma county; L. K. Watkins, Denver; Bradford H. DuBois, Denver; L. J. Finch, Montrose county.

Governor's Staff Exhibit.

General orders in reference to the governor's trip to St. Louis to attend the World's fair ceremonies were issued from the adjutant general's office this morning.

Governor Peabody will be attended by Adjutant General Sherman Bell and the members of the executive's official staff, otherwise known as the "30 gorgeous colonels," and on the return journey the Colorado party will be the guests of President Roosevelt, their private car being attached to the presidential train.

The order reads:

Circular No. 1:

By direction of the governor and commander-in-chief, the following is promulgated for the information and guidance of all concerned:

The commander-in-chief will attend the dedication of the World's fair at St. Louis, April 30, 1903.

The adjutant general and such members of the governor's personal staff and officers of the National guard who will attend will leave Denver via the Union Pacific on the evening of April 28, 1903, at 9:30 o'clock p. m.

The commander-in-chief will return from the christening of the battleship Colorado at Philadelphia in time to reach St. Louis Tuesday afternoon, April 28, 1903. He will be quartered at the Southern hotel, and all members of his staff will be quartered at the same place, arrangements having been made by the commander-in-chief to accommodate his staff at this hotel.

On the return journey from St. Louis the governor and his staff will occupy one or more special cars, as the necessity exists, and they will be the guests of the president of the United States on the return journey to Colorado, the car or cars being attached to the special train of the president.

All members of the staff will be expected to go to the state capitol and join in such courtesies as are extended on behalf of the people of this state to the president of the United States.

Any information in detail in regard to this journey will cheerfully be furnished any member of the governor's staff if you will communicate either by letter or otherwise with the adjutant general's office, and all officers are requested to at once notify the adjutant general by letter or telegraph at Denver whether or not they will go on this trip, and whether or not it is agreeable to them to have the adjutant general make all arrangements for the trip, including railroad transportation and Pullman accommodations.

By command of Governor Peabody.

Sherman Bell,
Adjutant General.

Official:
W. H. Sweeney, Jr.,
Colonel and Asst. Adjt. Gen.

The battleship Colorado is to be launched on April 25 and the governor will leave to participate in the exercises about next Saturday. Mrs. Peabody and other members of the family will accompany him. From Philadelphia the governor goes direct to St. Louis.

CRIPPLE CREEK RECOUNT MAY ELECT DEMOCRATS

Special to the Gazette.

Cripple Creek, April 11.—A writ of mandamus was issued by Judge W. P. Seeds at 4 o'clock this afternoon, directed to the judges of the Seventeenth election precinct of the city of Cripple Creek, requiring them to open the ballot box in that precinct and recount the ballots or show cause why they should not do so, giving them a certified time for an answer. The writ was based upon a long petition verified by Vernon Pfeiffer, one to the Democratic candidates for aldermen for this ward, in which the fact is recited that many ballots were counted for Barnard and Gardner, Republicans, that rightfully belonged and should have been counted for Pfeifer and Wright, who are Democrats. On the face of the returns, the Democratic ticket of Cripple Creek was defeated, but on account of irregularities at the polls, it now seems probable that the recount of the ballots will elect the Democratic ticket.

Reduction Plant in Cripple Creek Burned---Loss Estimated at $100,000.

Special to the Gazette.

Cripple Creek, April 11.—The Arequa mill was destroyed by fire shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. Just how the blaze started nobody seems to know. It burned rapidly, and was quickly a lot of smouldering ruins. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

The plant was erected about five years ago by W. H. Milliken and associates, but they did not handle it profitably, and a few months ago the El-Metallic bank closed out on a mortgage that was in reality held by D. H. Moffatt. A new company was then organized, known as the Colorado Reduction company, the stockholders in which are all eastern men. These people gave a lease on the mill to H. L. King and others of Milwaukee and these gentlemen intended to make it a perfect plant. Orders are now out for a large amount of machinery and they are wondering what they can do with it when it arrives. Eastern owners have been informed of the loss, but it is not yet known whether they will rebuild or not. Provided they do not do so Mr. King says he will put up a plant of his own.

NEW RAILWAY SURVEY THROUGH BACA COUNTY

By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.

Guthrie, O. T., April 11.—A preliminary survey is being made by the Santa Fe through Beaver county, Oklahoma, on the proposed line from Syracuse, Kas., to a point south of Albuquerque, N. M. This line is to shorten the time to the coast and 40 miles of it would be in Oklahoma, the same amount in Baca county, Colorado. The proposed route keeps east of the mountain passes and heavy grades. The route passes through Kenton and Garrett, O. T.

LEGISLATURE CHARGED WITH RUNNING A POLICY GAME

(By Associated Press exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

St. Louis, April 11.—State Senator Schoenlaub, who conducts a saloon here was arrested today on a charge of running a policy game in his saloon. He was indicted by the February grand jury on the charge. The indictment was returned last Saturday but was not served until today. The senator was admitted to bail in the sum of $800.

TRINIDAD IS BECOMING NOTORIOUS FOR MURDERS

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Trinidad, Colo., April 11.—George Wright, colored, about 33 years of age, was killed in a stabbing affray in a saloon in the Tenderloin district about 10 o'clock tonight, and Columbus Wilson, also colored, is under arrest, charged with the crime. Jealousy is assigned as the cause. Wilson and Wright engaged in a heated quarrel over two women who had been drinking in the wine rooms at the rear of the building, when Wilson, drawing a pocket knife, thrust it into the heart of his adversary. Wright walked about 50 yards and fell to the sidewalk dead. Wilson later gave himself up to the officers.

J. R. Clifton was shot and instantly killed about 6 o'clock this evening, by T. G. Thomas, at Bowen, a coal camp about 10 miles north of here. Family troubles were the cause. The two men met on the street a few minutes before 6 o'clock and Clifton, pulling his revolver, emptied it at Thomas. None of the shots took effect. Thomas ran into a saloon nearby and grabbing a rifle from behind the bar, went outside and shot Clifton dead.

An Italian employed at the El Moro coke ovens, was shot and seriously wounded about 3:30 o'clock this afternoon by a man giving his name as Wilson. The wound will probably result fatally. The Italian was riding along the road about a mile below El Moro when Wilson, riding up, shot him twice, one bullet taking effect. Wilson was arrested.

THE CROW RESERVATION.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Billings, Mont., April 11.—United States Senator Dietrich of Nebraska, who has arrived here has announced himself in favor of the speedy opening of the Crow reservation in this state. He says all the western senators are in favor of such a step.

STRENUOUS LIFE OF UNITED STATES.

That Makes Europe "Rich in Elegant American Widows and Orphans."

It may be asked if American domestic habits have not something to do with the frequent breakdowns of American nerves. In perhaps the majority of cases, in cities at least, the day is admirably arranged so as to give the business man no rest whatever until he gets into bed. It has come within our observation that, in our civilization, there are three systems of living out the ordinary working day. There is the French system, which is that of the continent of Europe in general; there is the English system; and there is the American system. The last combines the chief features of the other two. The Englishman goes to work late and comes away early, but during working hours he works all the time. His luncheon is light, and eaten hastily—perhaps at his desk. For this he makes up by a leisurely breakfast and a leisurely dinner; while he has the early part of the morning and the latter part of the afternoon to himself. The Frenchman, on the other hand, goes to work early, and works hard till noon. The American is apt to underrate the energy with which the Frenchman works while he is at work. But at noon work ceases, and he sits down to an abundant meal, well cooked, well served and eaten with appetite in peace.

After his dejeuner he has his petit verre, his smoke, and perhaps a game of dominoes or cards, while he discusses politics, the acts of the topics of the day. He takes his two hours of refreshment as a matter of course; he has no pricklings of conscience at wasting time, nor searchings of heart lest some one else should "get ahead of him." Even the laborer, who in America eats his cold midday meal in a ditch or behind a pile of boards, generally sits down in Europe to a decent table, daintily served and, however coarse his food, has time to eat otherwise than as the lower animals. Then with mind cleared and cheered, and body strengthened and refreshed, laboring man and gentleman turn return to their tasks, to work hard and late. The American system, as we have said, combines the chief features of the other two. The American goes to work early, like the Frenchman; like the Frenchman, he works late; but, like the Englishman, he takes no time to himself at midday. His luncheon is the merest "snack;" it is often cooked badly and served worse; it is often cold, perhaps, drawn from a paper in his pocket, and not served at all. As for any intellectual repose or mental relaxation from the grim fact of work—not only is it not thought of, but the very idea would be laughed to scorn. From the moment of setting forth to the moment of return, mind and body alike are deprived of their proper nourishment and rest, it is scarcely strange, therefore, that Europe should be rich in elegant American widows and orphans, and the churchyards at home too full of young men's graves.—Harper's Weekly.

Would Bear Half the Expense.

Vice president Caldwell of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad, was in Washington last month to attend the hearing on the advance in freight rates. After the hearing he said:

"This advance is a necessity, and nobody likes it. But nobody, though, can suggest a remedy for it. Did you ever hear about the minister with the crooked back? The present contingency reminds me of him.

"He was a fine little fellow, and he had been appointed to a new church. He went there and he preached to the people. They like his sermon but they did not like his figure. So they told him so. They sent a committee to him, and said that they did not like his bodily appearance. He rejoined heartily:

"'And neither do I, friends; and if you can get me repaired, I'll willingly bear half the expense.'

"So about this advance," concluded Mr. Caldwell. "We would be only too glad to correct it if you'll tell us how."—New York Tribune.

New York Spends Millions for Charity.

Charity finds a wide field of expression in New York. In all, there are probably 2,000 different institutions, conducted by churches, by societies, and supported by subscriptions, by the endowments of the wealthy, or by the persistent efforts of individuals. There be a charity for the mother before her child is born, for the city has free lying-in hospitals. There is a charity for the new born baby, should it be deserted by its parents, for it finds its way into the care of the superintendent of foundlings. There are many homes for boys and girls, some of these homes modest and poor, some of them most costly and elaborate; there are free schools of all sorts for youths and young girls; there are free employment places for grown men and women who are out of work and unfortunate, and there are homes, too, for the aged, for men and for women, and for husbands and wives together, when their days of strength and usefulness have passed and have left them unprovided for in their declining years. And finally there is a charity which conducts the funeral, for instance, when members may provide against dying in the potter's field, securing a dedicated place for their bones that is not a pauper's grave. Time to the newborn babe in the cradle, and to fathering old age in the hands of charity extended, edna Matthews in Leslie's Weekly.

IMMENSE FLORAL CLOCK

For THE ST. LOUIS FAIR

With its mechanical frame quite concealed beneath beautiful flowers and ... foliage plants, the mammoth floral clock that may be seen at St. Louis by visitors to the Louisiana Purchase exposition in 1904, will be by far the largest timepiece ever constructed.

The floral clock is immediately north of the Agricultural building, and to the visitor appears to be made entirely from contributions from the floral world. The mechanism of the clock is ... and the huge dial, 100 feet in diameter shows its face six inches above the ground. The dial, the hands, the ... hand being 50 feet long and ... five feet at each move, and all of the frame are so covered with flowers as to quite conceal any mechanical contrivance.

The numerals marking the hour are 15 feet in length and are made of bright colored coleus, a foliage plant that grows dense and may be pruned with the gardener's shears and kept symmetrical without fear of impairing the growth of the plant.

In a circle surrounding the numerals are collections of 12 distinct plants, each collection being 28 feet long and ... Was Hour Glass Also.

Still another mode of computing time will be shown by this immense recorder of time's flight, and this is by the primitive hour glass. On the south side of the dial, behind the numeral that denotes midday or midnight, is built a tower, 12 feet square and 18 feet high. The tower is of wood, and like most of the beautiful structures within the City of Knowledge, is covered with staff. The architecture is graceful and ornate. The top of this tower is surmounted with a mammoth hour glass, made of the heaviest and clearest crystal, with the receptacles for holding the ..., each six feet in length and four feet in diameter, at the base. TOLEDO COMMENT

The Czar of Russia, it is claimed, works 16 hours a day and a few days ... expressed a wish that he could ... some association which would enable him to strike against working more than eight hours.—(Boulder Herald.

It's Over.

Now the spring infliction is over, let us be thankful that our elections come only once in two years.—(Boulder Camera.

Radium.

It is said that the newly discovered mineral, radium, will give heat and light continuously for years, and perhaps without limit, without any loss of energy or force. As it is self-luminous and self-heating the question that puzzles scientists is to tell how that. A pinch of it will illuminate a large room and it is said that a pound of it in a glass jar, placed in a room, would soon burn everyone in that room to death. However, as it costs $1,000,000 a pound it is not likely to supplant electrocution or the old-fashioned gallows as a medium for inflicting capital punishment, or other domestic uses.—(Telluride Journal.

White Meat.

There is no danger of the dismemberment of Turkey as long as the ... European powers can not come to an understanding as to which shall have the larger portion of the white meat.—(Telluride Journal.

Cuban Treaty.

The Cuban reciprocity treaty was confirmed, but only after concessions had been made to its enemies which seriously jeopardize its ultimate success. Its operation is definitely postponed for a year and there are many who say forever.—(Silver Cliff Rustler.

Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt is speeding westward on his vacation trip and is being greeted by thousands of his admiring fellow citizens at every important stopping place. Although familiar with western scenes and western customs, the trip cannot help giving him a broader conception of the magnitude and wonderful possibilities of the great empire lying west of the Father of Waters.—(Fort Collins Courier.

A Quietus.

It is sincerely hoped that the senate will put a quietus on the bill carrying an appropriation of $50,000 for state canal No. 1. It is a pure and unadulterated steal and the house placed itself in the humiliating position of aider and abettor to an attempt to rob the state treasury for the benefit of a few unconscionable grafters.—(Ft. Collins Courier.

Cripple Creek and all Colorado are to be congratulated upon the termination of the Stratton litigation. The son gets enough, the state will have a fine home for dependent people, and a vast mineral territory will be thrown open to lease and operation. Besides that, the readers of the papers will be spared hundreds of columns of really prurient matter.—(Boulder Camera.

World's Fair.

The appropriation for the Louisiana Purchase exhibit, $100,000, can be remedied by the counties helping out in sums varying from $500 to $5,000. La Plata should hit about a $2,500 gait.—(Durango Democrat.

Second Tour.

Roosevelt will about make a second tour for bear (?) next spring. Grover gets all his bears in the east.—(Durango Democrat.

Grasshoppers.

When those who pride themselves on having money to throw at the birds learn that Colorado has silver dollars to throw at grasshoppers, they will hide their heads in very shame. They won't be in it a little bit.—(Fort Collins Courier.

Foretold.

Those who make strong kicks against the automobiles and the practice of racing them in the highways of our country must remember that the custom was prophesied in the bible. The fourth verse of the second chapter of Nahum reads thus:

"The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle against each other in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings."—(Loveland Reporter.

WHAT THE ... WANT

"War on the shirt waist" was the watchword with which the second annual convention of the National Dressmakers association opened yesterday in the dining hall of the Sherman house, says the Chicago Record-Herald.

The shirt waist is common; the shirt waist is burgeois; the shirt waist is a menace to the profits of the hard-working dressmaker. Therefore, down with it. Such was the emphatic point made by Mme. Baker in an address of welcome delivered before 200 enthusiastic devotees of the art of building gowns last night.

"Fight against the shirt waist all you can," she said, in determined tones. "Talk them down all you can. They are a danger to every modiste. How can we expect to do a successful business when shirt waists, which are in the mode, can be bought at any of the department stores for from $8 to $12. Can we afford to spend our time making shirt waists which not only a trivial profit? From a business point of view the shirt waist is a foe of our profession—and they aren't pretty, anyway."

"Dressmakers' Face."

Warning against the "dressmakers' face" was also issued by the lecturer. She declared that the strained, agonized expression of the modiste on a still hunt after ideas was becoming as well-known as the bicycle, the golf or the football face, and urged her hearers to look pleasant and forget their trials. The "dressmakers' face" was, she declared, especially prevalent at this time of year in the chase after spring and summer patterns.

Some of the dicta in regard to the constructing of gowns which the speaker laid down were as follows:

Trains are tabooed.

Skirts must be no longer than barely to touch the ground.

Everything must be smooth about the hips.

The skirt without a yoke has no place in fashions.

Short sleeves are bad form for street wear, even in the hottest of dog-days.

Blouses are no longer the thing.

Waists are to have a pompadour effect.

Modiste is Queen.

For the next week the Sherman house will be the abiding place of the builder of gowns, who will occupy the throne which her fashionable sister, the milliner, abdicated last week. The art of combining all the colors of the rainbow and of designing creations which will make fat women look thin and thin women look fat is her task.

Visiting modistes were disappointed yesterday because of delay in getting booths and models into position, which rather retarded the first meeting. Things are in running order, however, and the exhibits in which there are fewer importations and more "home products" are well in line for inspection.

The walls of the hall in which the convention is being held are outlined with gorgeously trimmed booths, where the "you needn't-sew-it," "sew-that-hump" and all other hooks and eyes known to woman are advertised; where the latest corsets, diamond-clasped and gold-trimmed; the newest skirt and shirt waist fasteners, ribbons, laces, embroideries and what-not are on exhibition.

In the center stands the double row of elaborate gowns roped off in exclusive fashion and covered with "Hands off" signs. The dressmakers came armed with their sketching pencils, and were kept busy jotting down new ideas. In this they were helped by the convenly programs, which contain the innovation for the help of the student dressmaker of outline gowns in which only the trimming need be sketched.

America in Lead.

If the world today admits that the American woman is the best dressed woman among all her sisters, it is equally true that the American dressmaker is showing promise of taking the leadership in the art of arraying the world's fairest type of womanhood in the robes that are worthy of her. This point was illustrated by this incident:

"Oh," exclaimed a woman in rich furs, "what a beautiful gown! An importation, of course. The very stamp of Paris is on it." And she smiled with an air of saying, "I've bought too many Parisian things not to know," and peeped around confidently for the designer's card. It wasn't Parisian; it wasn't New York, or even Chicago—it was Omaha, and it bore the stamp of originality in every line. It was an evening dress of liberty silk. The gown is hand-painted, not in flowers, but in plain color, and lavender, pink and yellow shades are blended. The combination of color is carried out in the foundation of the gown in a unique manner. First is a foundation of yellow silk, then one of yellow chiffon, then one of pale blue chiffon and over all one of pink chiffon coming next to the green overdress.

It is difficult, at first sight, to understand what local traffic can be expected from a road located so far north as the projected line of the Transcanada. To arrive at a proper appreciation of the facts of the case, it is necessary to take into consideration the peculiar course and direction of the isothermal lines of northern Canada. It will surprise many when they learn that excellent grain and vegetables are raised at Moose Factory on James bay, where the mean summer temperature is almost as favorable as that of Montreal. Still more remarkable does it, at first sight appear that where the projected railway is to traverse the Peace River valley, more than 600 miles north of the International boundary line, it will still be but half way from the boundary to the northern limit of wheat. In other words, the wheat belt of northwest Canada extends as far north from the International boundary as the distance from Quebec to Chicago. This is the country into which the great trek of American farmers is now taking place. The warm winds known as the Chinooks come across the mountains from the Japan current and alter the climate of this great area north of the Arctic, so that the climate of western Canada does not correspond with the latitude; the isotherms, or lines of equal mean temperature for any period of the year, instead of running east and west, as they were formerly supposed to do, have a tendency to run northwest and southwest, and the spring in the Peace River county opens up as early or earlier than it does in Winnipeg, 1,000 miles to the southeast.—("The Transcontinental Railway," by E. T. D. Chambers, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for April.

Fire-Fighter's Story

How the Strongest Man in the Philadelphia Fire Department—Once the Weakest—Gained His Strength and Health by Using Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney and Bladder Remedy.

HERE'S the story of a man who was near death's door and was saved by using Swamp-Root.

If he came to you and said: "My friend, do you suffer with kidney trouble? Does your back ache? Do you feel bad all over and can't tell exactly what's the matter? Have you tried medicines or doctors without benefit? Are you about discouraged? Then, do as I did, and get well—Use Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root! I know it will cure you."

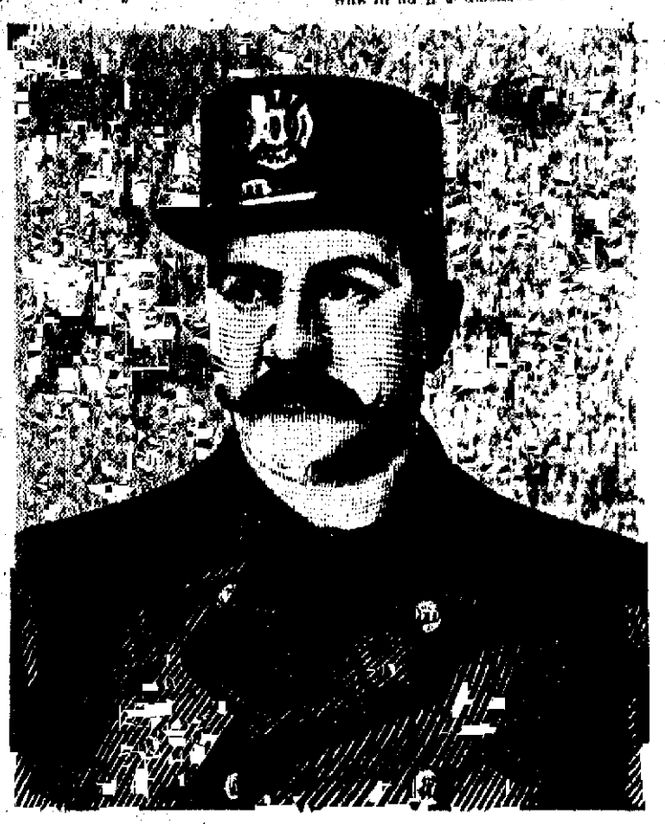
If he did this, would you believe him?

Wouldn't you, if you were a sufferer, follow his advice, knowing that he here living, sentient, vital testimony to the wonderful virtues of this great natural remedy?

WELL, that is just what Hugo Hutt, the strongest man in the Philadelphia Fire Department, hero of a hundred battles with the flames, is doing now through the medium of this newspaper.

Hugo Hutt has been connected with the Philadelphia Fire Department for the past four years. He is stationed at the engine house at Nineteenth and Callowhill streets. Mr. Hutt is known as the strongest man in the Fire Department and has taken many prizes at athletic tournaments for his prowess in the field of sports.

He is also an ex-sergeant of the United States Infantry, having for several years been stationed at Fort Niobrara, Neb. Mr. Hutt also served with the Sixth Pennsylvania Regiment during the Spanish-American war.



HUGO HUTT, PHILADELPHIA FIREMAN.

HERE is the story as he gave it to a special representative of Philadelphia's Great Newspaper, "The North American."

"You will hardly believe it when I tell you there was a time when my body was in such a diseased condition that my relatives and friends would have, at no time, been surprised to hear of my death. It was all due to kidney trouble, for which I could secure no relief. I was under the care of my family physician for a number of years, but he was unable to do me any good. I also consulted two noted specialists on kidney disease, but they were unable to give me more than temporary relief. I had already made application to join the army but was turned down on account of my bad physical condition.

"I was addicted to LA GRIPPE, pleurisy of all descriptions, SWAMP-ROOT.

"I wrote to Dr. Kilmer & Co., of Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle, and the first spell me was so noticeable that I send immediately and bought a supply from my druggist with the result that in a comparatively short time I felt perfectly restored and became the man that I am now.

"I served a number of years in the army, and for the past four years I have been connected with the Philadelphia Fire Department. My work, both in the army and fighting fires in Philadelphia, has been of the most arduous, and work that I could not do did I not have a strong physique.

"I do not know what the words 'Kidney Trouble' mean now, and do not expect to. I cannot speak too highly of Swamp-Root. A few bottles of this great remedy did more for me than a dozen physicians."

(Signed) HUGO HUTT,
865 Hillman St., Philadelphia, Pa.

AND this is only one man's story—if the average reader of a newspaper could be persuaded to read the thousands of such testimonials which come to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the kidney troubles which now afflict humanity would be cut down fifty per cent.

For these testimonials all prove beyond a doubt that the greatest cure for kidney, liver and bladder troubles is

SWAMP-ROOT

NATURE'S GREATEST AID TO THE SUFFERING.

EDITORIAL NOTICE—Swamp-Root is so remarkably successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all of our readers who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail, also a book that tells all about it and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. In writing, be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the Colorado Springs Sunday Gazette. The regular fifty cent and one dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SUPERINTENDENT MACAFREE... NEW ENGINEERING... PRACTICAL ENGINEERING

In order to further increase the usefulness of the proposed new engineering school of Colorado college and to give the students of the school a glimpse at the practical side of electrical engineering D S Macaffree, general superintendent of the Colorado Springs & Interurban railway, has offered to conduct students of the school through the power house and other buildings of the company at different times next year and to give a small portion of his time to explaining on these visits the purpose and construction of the different pieces of machinery in the buildings. While the new engineering school will not be started until the opening of the new college year this fall, Mr Macaffree has offered to allow members of the faculty to take students through the company's plant this term in order that more students may be interested in the work and take a course in electrical engineering

Trips to the power house will probably become one of the features of the course, as the machinery at the plant is of the latest type and manufacture and the operation of the system is conducted along the most modern lines. While the majority of the trips will be made by students in charge of members of the faculty Mr Macaffree has consented to accompany the parties as often as his time and business will permit and explain the more difficult engineering problems that confront the modern street railway company

Mr. Macaffree, it may be said, is very well known over the country as an electrical engineer.

...s Meeting... May... New Town...

The election at Fountain for the selection of town officers will doubtless be held Tuesday, May 5. Under the advice of City Attorney Sheafor, Clerk of the County Court H M Mason has caused a notice of the fact of incorporation to be published in the Fountain newspaper, and this notice will be followed by the publication on the part of the commissioners, calling the election for town officers At least two weeks' notice must be given of this election, and Mr Sheafor has advised those who have the matter in charge that the earliest date will be May 5.

It is conceded by those who are taking the greatest interest in the matter that the first mayor of the town will be Henry Link Mr Link is proprietor of the Link hotel and is very popular with all of the citizens of the town. He is one of the oldest residents Those who hold this view, however, declare that inasmuch as the opposition to incorporation was a surprise to them when it began to assume shape they would not be surprised if another opposition should spring up in the nature of another candidate for mayor

There have been no names mentioned for the other officers but it is announced that the active spirits in the matter of incorporation will doubtless be honored with a selection to a place on the town's first governing body.

Among those who have thus been active are George J Phillips W. G. Riddock J C. Quick, O L Rock, C. C Child and John S Mushat

All of the officers of the little town will serve without compensation and it is for this reason that it is expected those who have been active in incorporation affairs will be chosen when it comes to the election of town fathers

...Meeting

Van B. Rouse, treasurer of the board of World's fair commissioners, will go to Denver tomorrow to attend the meeting of the board, which is to be held to discuss various matters in regard to the new appropriation bill. Mr Rouse states that he is of the opinion that there will be no money available to meet the appropriation and that unless other provision is made for the payment of the expenses which will be incurred, Colorado will be without a proper showing at St. Louis. "Before drawing any checks for the payment of any bills, I shall be sure that there is money back of them," said Mr Rouse yesterday, "and no bills will be contracted with my consent unless there is the money on hand to meet them."

Mr. Rouse believes it is possible that the general appropriation bill passed by the legislature will be found null and void, in which case there is a possibility of an extra session of the assembly and thus a chance that some provision will yet be made for providing funds for a proper exhibit at the fair

RYAN ... SUMMONS

A suit was filed in the county court yesterday by W H. Goshen against Hugh H. Ryan, asking judgment in the sum of $1,950. The plaintiff alleges for his cause of action, that on December 3, 1902, he entered into an agreement with the defendant whereby he was to act as an agent for him in the sale of his ranch upon certain conditions and for a certain compensation.

Ryan's ranch contained 160 acres and by the terms of the agreement set forth by Goshen, was to be sold for not less than $13,000 By the terms of the same agreement, Goshen was to receive $1,950, the amount asked for in the complaint, as commission for selling the ranch, and as consideration for looking up the abstract of title which Ryan was to furnish by the 15th of March next. This date, according to the complaint, was agreed by both parties.

Goshen alleges further that he sold the property for more than the amount set forth, that an abstract of title was duly demanded and that he was ... property was sold to the Telluride company. After setting forth these allegations, Goshen states that although he has demanded payment of the sum agreed upon, it has not been paid and he has instituted suit for that purpose

Twenty days are allowed Ryan within which to reply

MINE SUIT...

Suit was filed yesterday in the district court by Martha J Atkins against Joseph T. Jackson on two promissory notes, made out originally payable to others but transferred to her. On the first note she asks judgment in the sum of $80 50 The complaint alleges that the plaintiff purchased the note in good faith from the original owner, not knowing that it had already been paid Claiming to have been an innocent purchaser without knowledge of the facts, she demands that she be paid the amount of the note

The second note was originally made out for $1,200 secured by a mortgage on a certain piece of property of the defendant The complaint alleges in reference to this that the note had fallen due and was not paid and that foreclosure of the mortgage had followed It also alleges that the money so received was not sufficient to satisfy the amount of the note and asks judgment in the sum of $612 41 Interest at the rate of 9 per cent is also asked

COMMISSIONERS ASK FOR A NEW TRIAL

H. L. Chambers as attorney for the board of county commissioners filed a motion for a new trial yesterday in the matter of the suit of Teller county for a division of the court house and poor house funds The motion is asked on the ground that the court erred in not holding that the law requiring the division was unconstitutional This motion is preliminary to an appeal to the supreme court of the state. It is expected that the motion will not be granted and upon this refusal the appeal will be taken

NEW MOVEMENT... COMPANY...

Companies L and ... Are Considering the Organization of Stock Company to Purchase Site and Erect Building---Colonel W. A. Davis Favors the Plan.

Plans are now on foot whereby a new armory for the local companies of the Colorado National guard may be erected in the near future. It has been suggested that members of the local companies form a stock company and purchase a lot and erect a building themselves. This plan which has been successfully carried out in Detroit resulting in the erection of a $40,000 armory by the Detroit Light Infantry is meeting with considerable favor among the members of the companies and active steps may be taken within a very short time to put the plans in effect. It is suggested that a stock company be formed and $10,000 worth of stock sold. Stock could be sold at either $1 per share or at $10 the price being made low in order that every one of the 106 members of the two companies might take one or more shares. What money that could not be raised by the members themselves could be raised by selling stock to friends of the militia men

Plans have already been drawn for an armory to cost about $10,000. There is a demand for a portion of the funds of El Paso county

Judge Seeds will hold court Tuesday and for as many days following as may be necessary to clear up the remaining cases on the January docket Attorneys who have cases set undisposed of will appear Tuesday morning and arrange for their trial

Letters of administration were taken out yesterday in the county court by L H Goudy on the estate of E G Slaughton The estate is stated to consist of real property in Victor and 1,200 shares of consolidated Copper Mining company The deceased had no relatives of any sort and the letters were issued to Mr Goudy as a creditor Slaughton died September 11, 1901

A motion was filed yesterday in the district court by the city of Manitou asking that the complaint filed against them recently by John Wertz be made more specific The complaint referred to in the motion was filed several weeks ago asking for $5,000 damages from the city of Manitou for injuries alleged to have been sustained by the raising of a grade

There are 20 clerks in branch No 81, and 21 carriers in local branch No 204 of the National association so that the numbers of spellers are about equal It is planned to make the event of the spelling match the occasion for a big social time Refreshments will be served and games will be played after the spelling match

ACT OF KINDNESS CAUSES MUCH ALARM AMONG THE NEIGHBORS

Chief of Police King and Detective Atkinson yesterday were sent on a wild chase after a supposed kidnaper. A little girl ran breathless into police headquarters about 10 o'clock in the morning declaring that a man had run off with her little sister Lottie Cocks The supposedly kidnaped child was 10 years old and the daughter of Mr and Mrs Harry J Cocks 718 South Walnut avenue The officers set out in pursuit but had not gone far when they learned that the supposed kidnaper was none other than Joseph B Donovan The little girl had asked him for a ride in his buggy and he had allowed her to climb on behind

CLEANING OUT THE IRRIGATION DITCHES

The street committee of the City council has started a force of men to work within the last few days cleaning out the irrigation ditches preparatory to the opening of the irrigating season, which will be in about two or three weeks

The parks will be the first to be flooded and these will be followed by the flooding of private premises wherever ditches are connected When the season fairly opens, the flooding will take place about once every two weeks

TEGARDEN HAS BEGUN HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS

An application for a writ of habeas corpus was filed in the district court yesterday by William K Brown in behalf of W H Tegarden Tegarden is the man who refuses to pay the city a license for the privilege of driving a [illegible] wagon He was fined $25 in police court Friday for violation the law in that respect At a stated at that time however Tegarden declared that he will not pay it as he says that the license law is unconstitutional and that he will stay in jail before he will comply with its provisions

The application for the writ of habeas corpus is predicated upon the assumption that the law is invalid and that his imprisonment is illegal In order to maintain it it will be necessary for the attorneys to make it appear to the court that the law is unconstitutional

The matter will come up for hearing tomorrow morning before Judge Lewis [illegible] Extension Bocs Through on Com Major [illegible] ong and's Pura[illegible] ncreased to 399 and [illegible] arr's Pure[illegible] hown to be 57[illegible].

The official vote, as announced by City Clerk R. M. MacMillan yesterday, increases the majority of W. H. Toupland over his opponent, John Voorhees, by 14 votes, making his total majority 230. The figures on the other offices show only slight changes. The official plurality of Judge Ira Harris over Van E. Rouse is shown to be 1,574 and his majority over all candidates to be 88.

It was also announced by Mr. MacMillan that so far as he had canvassed the votes on the new city hall extension bonds they had carried by a very slim majority. The indorsement of the refunding bonds has also carried, although the vote has not yet been officially determined. The confusion in regard to this was caused by the record of these votes from two precincts having been locked up in the ballot boxes. The keys for the boxes are still in the possession of the judges and it was impossible for the city clerk to get at them. They will be counted tomorrow and the vote announced then.

The canvassing of the votes was done by Clerk MacMillan and Mayor Robinson, according to the provisions of the law respecting the matter. The result as recorded, will be reported to the last meeting of the council, which will be held April 20. The council will then declare those who received the highest vote to be the duly elected city officials for the ensuing two years. That will be the last act of the present council and with its completion it will adjourn sine die. The new council will then convene and perfect organization.

The other officers will be in a position to qualify and it is probable that this preliminary will be performed within the day or two following. The complete vote as given out by the city clerk is as follows:

[illegible] Telegraph Seems Worried

The Evening Telegraph seems very much worried over the fact that this county is liable to have the onerous burden of the expense of a grand jury. In its issue of April 9, this same paper in speaking to the city officials-elect, says: "The good name of your party has been dragged in the mire, and what is worse, the good people of this city have been disgraced and humiliated by these officials who have betrayed their trust."

This charge alone is sufficient, if established, to warrant the calling of a grand jury. If the charge can not be sustained, then those officials referred to should bring suit for libel against a paper which would give circulation to such slanderous reports, and furthermore, if the Telegraph's libelous statement be not true, then the city should withdraw its support from a paper that will circulate matter which results in disgracing and degrading the fair name of our city.

Again, if this disreputable organ of partisan politics refrained, during a two-weeks campaign, from giving the honest voters of this city, the information that it must have had in order to reach the conclusion above quoted, so much the more should it be condemned and be considered as particeps criminis in the very matters which necessitate and absolutely demand the investigation by a legal body of reputable citizens.

After all that this same Telegraph has published in its three most recent issues it now fears the wrath of an indignant populace and endeavors to deprecate the need of a grand jury by raising the question of its expense to the taxpayers and deplores the fact that said jury should be demanded by an ex-office holder. Is it not a fact that there are and very soon will be several more ex-office holders who do not seem very anxious to have any investigation?

Now this same sheet has seen fit to refer to me and gives great prominence to the fact that I was a candidate for mayor in the last election and that I refused to sign a call for a grand jury. It seems strange that this journal should single me from ten thousand citizens and voters as being the one of all who should sign said call. The natural conclusion forces itself upon any reasonable mind that I was the only citizen of his acquaintance whose duty bore heavily enough on his conscience to impel him to action. I may be pardoned for using the word conscience in the presence of an editor such as the Telegraph has.

Now, I did not sign that call, for reasons best known to myself, and when that jury is called I shall take great pleasure in aiding, in any way in my power, its investigations and furnishing whatever of evidence I may possess to enable it to reach its conclusions. If the Telegraph will do as much, that jury will not be called in vain.

Van E. Rouse.

[illegible] Suit Filed Tomorrow

The petition in the suit of Joseph B. Donovan against I. Harry Stratton, for $35,000, will be filed tomorrow or next day, according to the plaintiff. Its details have not yet been given out, either by the attorneys for Mr. Donovan, or by Mr. Donovan himself.

It was stated yesterday by one who is acquainted with the details, however, that the summons was issued on an agreement alleged to have been entered into between I. Harry Stratton and the man who had taken such an interest in his welfare, and that the terms of the agreement required Donovan to advance money in the preparation of the trial and the securing of witnesses.

When Mr. Donovan was seen in regard to the matter yesterday, he refused to go into the details of the case. He stated, however, that he had tried to receive compensation on the basis of his action, from young Mr. Stratton, before he filed the suit.

"I hated like everything to bring the suit," he declared, "but as the young man refused to listen to me, I consulted some of my friends in the matter. They advised me to sue and I did. The summons was filed first because we wanted to get service before Harry left town, and we also hoped that it would be the means of having the matter settled without the necessity of a trial.

"I do not charge that Stratton left town in order to get away from the suit; he had planned that before the matter was known to him. He knew that the suit was to be filed before he was served with the summons, however, for I had told him that such would be the result of his failure to have an accounting with me.

"The matter between us is purely one of business, and the suit will be conducted upon that theory. In regard to Harry Stratton's stand in the matter I can only say that he has appeared very ungrateful. I do not say, however, that our friendship has been severed."

The attorneys who have the suit in hand were as obdurate in the matter yesterday as they were the day before and according to Mr. Donovan, it is upon their advice that he refuses to divulge much.

The actual terms of the suit which thus enters between Harry Stratton and the man who, more than any other aided him in his contest of the will of his father, will apparently not be learned until the papers are filed of record.

Attorneys Gunnell, Chinn & Miller, who handled Stratton's interest in the will contest, have not as yet received any word from him regarding the suit. Judge A. T. Gunnell stated yesterday that he would take the case and defend Stratton's interests, if the matter was placed in his hands. J. C. Chinn of the same firm, declared that Mr. Donovan had come to them in the first place but that they had refused to listen to his story, for the reason that they would not agree to handle the case for him.

[illegible] Appointments Are Expected

The new position to be created in the city government, that of matron of the city jail, may go to Mrs. L. B. Farrar, who is making an active canvass for support and who has stated she has been promised the position. Mrs. Farrar has rendered valuable service to the Republican party and her candidacy is being supported by several of the leaders. Mrs. Farrar has been prominent in G. A. R. circles and is well known through her connection with the Woman's Relief Corps. She possesses much business ability and conducts an employment agency.

It is probable that all of the appointments will be made by April 20, the next date on which the council meets. The mayor elect has made no announcement as to who will be appointed by him. The aldermen-elect are all busy with their own investigation of what is on the pie counter as the mayor is looking into the claims of recognition of those who are after jobs under the new administration and the aldermen are being besieged by applicants for the elective offices and by those who desire influence brought on the mayor in regard to the patronage at his individual disposal.

[illegible] Street Railway Extension

One real candidate and several possible candidates are in line for positions on the board of education to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of R. C. Thayer several months ago and the retirement of Judge W. S. Morris in June. Wm. W. H. R. Stote, who was elected by the members of the board at the time of Mr. Thayer's resignation to serve the remainder of the year, will be a candidate for election by the people to serve the one year remaining of Mr. Thayer's five-year term.

A petition is now being circulated on the West Side to have W. F. Kinney, secretary of the Colorado Springs Mining Stock exchange, become a candidate for the posit on caused by Judge Morris' retirement. Those who are signing the petition are residents of the West Side. The West Side has been represented on the board for the past 10 years, a Mr. Leach having served before Judge Morris. Mr. Kinney is an alumnus of Dartmouth college, and his connection with the mining exchange has made him well known in the city. He has the indorsement of practically all the residents of the West Side. The election will be held May 4.

[illegible] Street Railway Extension

The directors of the Colorado Springs & Interurban street railway system will consider the petition of the East Side residents for an extension of the line, at their next meeting, one week from Wednesday. The matter will be fully discussed at the meeting and the feasibility of the proposed route will be fully investigated. The directors will consider other matters of importance in relation to the system and will probably take up the matter of improvements in the Cheyenne park at the end of the Cheyenne canon line.

Concerts by the Midland band will start next Sunday although it is not likely that they will be a permanent feature until later in the season.

Beginning today cars will be run at intervals of eight minutes to Ivywild on Sundays and when the Broadmoor Casino opens a seven and one-half-minute service will be put on for special occasions.

[illegible] Appointed by Governor

E. M. De La Vergne of this city has been appointed by Governor Peabody one of the members of the arbitration board, created by the last legislature. William Walk of Pueblo, is the other appointee and the two are expected to select a third member. Mr. De La Vergne was chosen as a representative of the employers of labor and Mr. Walk is the representative of the labor organizations of the state.

The act of the assembly in creating the board of arbitration required the appointment of two members by the governor and his selections were made fro a long list of names suggested by the employers of labor, as well as employes.

Governor Peabody also announced the appointment yesterday of the members of the new state board of live stock commissioners, naming M. W. Jones of El Paso county as one of the appointees. The board consists of nine members and is a consolidation of the state veterinary board and the stock commissioners' board. Several important appointments are to be made by the board including a state veterinary surgeon at $1,500 a year and as many cattle and sanitary inspectors at $100 per month as the board may deem necessary.

ANDREW CARNEGIE HAS NOT REPLIED TO LAST LETTER

Andrew Carnegie has not yet replied to the letter recently sent him by the members of the site committee appointed by the library trustees. A letter was sent by Dr. J. R. Robinson on behalf of the committee to Mr. Carnegie last Monday stating that the site had been selected and that the committee and library trustees now awaited Mr. Carnegie's suggestions in regard to the library building. Pending the arrival of a letter from Mr. Carnegie preparations for the erection of the building are practically at a standstill.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THEODORE THOMAS ORCHESTRA. The Theodore Thomas orchestra, consisting of 40 artists, will give one of their popular concerts in the Temple theater next Thursday evening. One of the popular numbers on the program will be the overture "Oberon." An exchange says:

"Oberon," or "The Elf-King's Oath," Weber's last opera and almost his very last composition was completed in London on April 9, 1826. The autograph score bears the following inscription: "Vollendet d. 9 April, 1826. Vormittags 11-45 Uhr, und auf die ganze Welt Oberon. Soli Deo Gloria!!! C. M. v. Weber."

"Softly sounding through the surrounding silence we hear the long-drawn note of Oberon's horn, the potent spell by which all the magical enchantments in the opera are conjured up. Elfin forms flit gracefully through the foliage. The fairy dance ends in a gentle sigh of love. Here we are with one of von Weber's most charming and original orchestral devices. This tender love-melody is harmonized in three parts, the upper voice being sung by the violins and 'cello in unison, the middle voice by two clarinets in their low chalumeau register, and the bass sustained by the second 'cello. Nothing could be simpler, and yet the effect is strikingly original and orchestral. Then comes a sudden crash of the whole orchestra, the most sudden, the most expressive, the loudest sounding crash in all orchestral music. It is like a voice everywhere; it does gradually give rise to more complex incidents, in that bursting upon the unprepared ears of the audience, than any other single passage in all orchestral music. And surely by strength, it is not in its noise; every time you hear it, it strikes louder and more terrifically than the first. The ensuing Allegro con moto is also with a very pleasing effect for the violins, and after the development of this theme, first introduced by the clarinets and then taken up by the first violins, to the accompaniment of Sir Huon's love song. The [illegible] is taken [illegible] Oberon's grand [illegible]

her most treasured possessions are costly jewels and gifts which marked the esteem and appreciation of royal personages in many lands

Of the many important attractions submitted by Manager Nye this season the engagement of Miss O'Neill must rank as one of the most notable. The roles undertaken by her challenge comparison with Sara Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse and others in the first flight of dramatic endeavor. Only twenty-six or twenty-seven years of age, she successfully negotiates characterizations which other artists dared not attempt until they had reached mature age. Her entire career has been most brilliant. Mary Anderson and others have risen rapidly but their ascent to fame cannot compare in swiftness with Nance O'Neill's. She possesses the capacity for taking old characters, that is characters that have been played over and over again and to each she gives new life and interest. She is too young to copy others. Therein lies the secret of her success. It is individuality.

"ZIG-ZAG ALLEY"

A combination of farce-comedy musical comedy pantomimic trick comedy and spectacle, is "Zig-Zag Alley" the new skit in which Zeb & Zarrow comedians appear at the Opera house on Monday, April 20.

The piece has something of a plot and a number of funny situations although it is primarily a trick comedy and trick scenery is a most important part of the equipment. The chorus is said to be large enough for musical farce and the costuming is a feature. The book is by James Gorman, whose one idea has been to produce clean, wholesome fun. Mr Gorman who has also staged the production, is known as a producer. "Zig Zag Alley" has vaudeville specialties and is filled with songs. In one scene a cyclone coming with a suddenness that dazes the audience, seizes everything on the stage and whirls it round and round. Another scene is the board walk at Atlantic City, N. J., the feature of one of the most prominent seaside resorts in the country. A third trick scene is the underground station where the stage is filled with trick scenery. Other features are a mechanical dummy and a human photograph.

One of the ensembles is "The Girl With the Banjo Eyes," a new stage conceit, sung by Zeb and Zarrow and two girls. Another prominent musical number is "Sunny Africa." The special members of the company include Ben Z. Dillon, Harry LeMarr, Schrock and Rice, Winnifred Greenwood, Marjy Moore, Edith O'Reilly, Katherine Manning, Milt and Mamie Wood, Harry Sawyer, Lillie Seiger, Anna Casselle, Florence Ihuize, Helen Stone, Harriet Miner, Adele Spencer, Emma Lippman, Margery Crosier, Elizabeth Elverson, Gemma Roscoe, Della Roman and the famous Zeb & Zarro trio.

On Monday evening at Caledonian hall there will be given an attractive entertainment, unique in its character and pleasing in its novelty. Gavin Spence and Miss Flora Macdonald will give a rendition of Scottish songs, recitals and dances that have gained the greatest praise from the press in every place that these versatile entertainers have visited. A few extracts are here given:

"As delineators of Scottish song and story, they are peers above any artists in that line." Philadelphia Enquirer, May 21, 1902.

"From start to finish the applause was prolonged and loud, and they were voted royal entertainers in every sense of the word."—Dallas News, Jan. 6, 1903.

"By their Scotch songs and dances their bits of history and story that interspersed the program delighted the immense crowd that filled the amphitheater." Waterloo Courier, July 2, 1902.

INTERESTING TO EVERYONE.

Tomorrow evening two most interesting lectures will be delivered at the Opera house.

Col. John P. Finnerty of Chicago will deliver his famous address on "American Citizenship." The lecture has been received with the greatest enthusiasm wherever heard.

On the same evening following Col. Finnerty an address will be made on that most perplexing subject, "The Irish Land Question."

This lecture will be delivered by Hon. Joseph Devlin, M. P. who will make a clear explicit explanation of this whole question. As Mr. Devlin is thoroughly conversant with the subject, his address will be listened to with great attention, as many persons are anxious to know something regarding it.

Admission to both lectures 50 cents, reserved seats on sale at Opera house office.

The college Tigers defeated the team of the Minnequa hospital yesterday afternoon at Minnequa field in Pueblo, by a score of 15 to 3. After the first inning had been played the result was never in doubt and it was only a question for the local men to keep together and pile up the score. The game they put up was steady and showed consistent playing. The college boys used their batting eye with a vengeance and secured 14 hits off Osborne. Three of these were home runs. For the college Hester did the best work. Only six hits were made off his delivery and these were kept scattered. His work with the stick was also of the phenomenal. Out of five times to bat he secured two home runs, a three bagger and a single.

The work of the Pueblo men was not what was expected of them. Their play lacked team work and on several occasions they went clear into the air. Powers and Adams put up the steadiest game for them. The following is the score:

[illegible] Shamrock [illegible]

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Weymouth, April 11.—The first contest today of the challenger for the America's cup under actual racing conditions, was distinctly disappointing to [illegible] who expected so much at the results of the preliminary trials. The Shamrock I won on her handicap allowance, the new craft only beating her 64 minutes over a course 34 miles long. On the first half of the course the challenger outsailed the older boat handsomely, but in the fresher wind on the second turn, she little more than held her own. This was only partially explained by a fluke of wind which favored the Shamrock I, and enabled her to gain considerable ground on the second boat.

The course of the first real contest between the two Shamrocks under strict racing conditions was altered today to 30 miles instead of 42 miles, as announced yesterday. The starting line was off Portland, thence easterly to a mark off Lulworth cove and back across the mouth of Weymouth bay to a mark off Portland and thence home, twice around.

The handicap allowance of Shamrock I was not officially declared prior to the start, but it was understood to be 10 minutes.

Captain Wringe of Shamrock III had easily the best of the start.

When they turned the mark off Portland, Shamrock III had a lead of over six minutes on less than 12 miles sailing. Thence a broad easy reach brought the boats home and on this point of sailing Shamrock I held her opponent well. The challenger's showing on the reach was disappointing.

On the second run down the wind to the Lulworth cove mark the old boat had somewhat of an advantage by bringing up a fresher breeze and Shamrock III was only able to make a minute and a half between the marks.

Shamrock I was fouled by a steam yacht when half way through the second run to Lulworth cove. The accident was of little disadvantage to her, as Shamrock III's sailmaker was immediately doused in order to make the conditions even.

Shamrock III, 1 48 38.
Shamrock I, 1 50 09.

Prize fighters come from a diversity of callings. Still it is notable that most of the successful ones come from trades where hammering is necessary. Very few men graduate into pugilism direct from idleness or another form of athletics. A few men like the English bantams, Pedlar Palmer and Andy Tokell, fought from boyhood; a few jockeys and bicyclists have turned to fighting when they were past their prime in their own professions.

Blacksmiths have always been good fighters. Before there was any sort of rules for the boxers, the smiths were noted fighters and they have never lost their name. Lanky Bob Fitzimmons is the top-notcher among the horseshoe forgers just now, but pugilistic history is full of the names of other men who have gone from the anvil to ring victory.

Champion James J. Jeffries was a boilermaker, and that craft, with its severe labors and necessity for hammering incessantly on hard iron, has turned out other fighters. "Kid" Lavigne was a cooper in Saginaw, and his work there fitted him for the fighter's trade. James J. Corbett was a clerk and Joe Choynski a candy clerk before they began fighting but their coming from such softening trades is an exceptional thing.

Big Jack Johnson who is colored champion now, and feared by most of the white fighters was a wheelman on a lake boat when Billy Lavigne first saw him. Lavigne was running a fighting club in Erie and Johnson was a participant in a preliminary once, and showed well. Lavigne remembered him and gave him another chance. After Lavigne went to the coast he needed a man to match with George Gardner. He sent for Johnson and the latter has been winning since.

Frank Lavigne of Detroit was called upon some time ago for an opinion on a young fellow who seemed to be coming. He found that the youth had got his physical development by lifting boxes and crates.

"He'll never do; he'll be muscle bound," Lavigne said. And the lover has since proved that the estimate was true.

The spreaders for the mainmast of the Reliance are fashioned something after the plan followed in the production of the spreaders of the cup boat Defender, built in Bristol in 1895, with the difference that those for the new boat are much greater in extent, even compared with the spreaders of more recent cup craft.

Being single, or, in other words, there being but one set of them for the new boat, they are more powerful and extend farther out-board on each side. The mast fittings to hold the arms of the spreaders consist of heavy wrought-iron collars built to the spar and extending into sockets on each side. The sockets are not more than a foot each in length but are of solid construction.

In line with the policy of the designer of the new boat in reducing weight aloft, he has gone to wooden spreader arms made of the finest quality of oak and the inboard ends shaped to fit squarely in the sockets. It is the story that the spreaders, when stationed will be of an extent greater than the length of the masthead, which is upward of 20 feet, sufficient to give a good base to the topmast runners, which to a great extent precludes the possibility of the topmast buckling when the club topsail is up.

Special to the Gazette.

Boulder, Colo., April 11.—The first home game of the intercollegiate season was played on Gamble field today between the State School of Mines team and the Varsity nine. Umpire Jorgensen called the game temporarily in the eighth inning on account of a shower with the score 4 to 3. The shower lasted in about 15 minutes but some of the Golden players thinking that the game had been called off, so that they might reach a train, left the field. Jorgensen then awarded the game to the Boulderites on the ground that the game had been but temporarily suspended. Although won on a technicality, the result was very unsatisfactory as it did not show the relative merits of the two aggregations. The game was close and interesting and fairly snappy considering the cold weather. Vaughn was star artist for the Golden team and hardly showed the form of last year striking out 11 men and giving five passes. Alderman, a freshman, pitched for the "Varsity boys. He was wild at times but finally steadied down and pitched himself out of tight places when necessary.

Mass Plays May Be Abolished by Football Rules Committee

The football rules committee is scheduled to meet next Saturday at New York. They have already had several meetings and have gathered the advisability of modifying the present code in use among the colleges. The question has been considered from all sides but little has been done excepting minor matters to make the game less "brutal." Nothing has been accomplished towards placing those who are crying for open plays. This may be done at the next meeting.

Just what the committee will be able to do along that line is hard for even them to say. It is known that at least one member of the committee, Assistant Walter Camp, the Yale dictator, is opposed to making any change in the rules that will alter the style of play. It is understood that the "V" shaped wedge will be legislated seven men in the scrimmage line "all times." This will affect but slightly the style of game played by most all the teams last year. There were few successful plays used in which there were less than six men in the line. It was either one tackle-back or one guard-back.

The proposed change will prevent the massing of the men back of the line. Only the half-backs, full-backs and quarter-back will be used back of the line. If a guard or a tackle is drawn back one of the other men will have to take his place in the line in order to have the required seven.

This change, while it will in a measure prevent the force of the mass plays, will not entirely overcome the so-called evil. Nor is it clear how the "evil" can be overcome and still have the game of football. Of late years much attention has been given to developing the style of defense with the result that a play to gain ground must have a lot of power, snap and momentum in it. If legislation should prevent force and power being put into plays then there will be no ground gaining and consequently no scoring. The interest would be gone.

It is a self evident fact that open plays will not gain ground consistently. An open play, such as an end run or some other style of open formation is useful and effective when mixed up occasionally with mass plays. They have the effect of throwing the opposing team off its guard and oftentimes the plays gain ground. But they are often lost ground, and speedy ends learn to size up such a style of play will lose more ground than it will gain.

Consequently the committee is very wary about making rules that will compel the game to be too open. Nothing in that line can be done unless rules are made to regulate the style of defense. As the rules now stand a team can play the kind of game where 11 players when on the defense, and the tactics are so well understood that an open play has not more than one chance in 10 of succeeding.

The idea of keeping seven men in line on the attacking side has met with more approval of the committee than any other suggestion, as it does restrict the running of men behind the line and does not take from the attack all its power and strength. There is nothing to the suggestion that will prevent a man running with the ball from his position in the line. To play at a tackle or an end running with the ball through the opposite side of the line is very pretty as well as an effective play. Instead of having the backs and a guard or two guards to help him through the line the runner will have to depend upon the assistance of the backs alone and whatever help the line men are able to afford him.

This seems like a very feasible change to make. If a change has to be made.

The committee will likely rule against the wearing of heavy padded such as soft leather caps and the like. Men will who suggest that the full back will not be able to put any of his own men ahead after making a kick. This is to do away with the men in the opposing line from charging through and jumping on the kicker in order to prevent him from making down the field and putting his team on side. It will also give the defending side more time in which to handle the ball and it will be unlawful for a man on the opposing side to touch the ball until it has touched or been touched by a man on side on the defensive.

Another suggestion that will be made by the committee will be that the side scored against will have the choice of kicking off or giving the ball to the opposing team to kick off. This will give the team the last scored upon a chance to retain the ball and thus a chance for advantage if used correctly.

"MUGGSY" M'GRAW WILL USE TWO SLAB ARTISTS

Manager McGraw of the New York Giant has originated a new play which he will put into operation when the championship season begins next week. In connection with the new departure he will have Mathewson work his pitching arm only every other day, the idea being that in this way he will have two pitchers in every game on hand in the points the umpires and the other team. McGraw says that it is a good thing to keep in adopting the plan is the catcher. It will give the second pitcher a chance to get warmed up after the first pitcher and opponent have had up. But he will take chance that the game will be lost by a player among the Giants who does not try his best. It will be carried under the [illegible]

ROOM FE[illegible]

The [illegible] club, an organization of young school girls, held a very successful sale yesterday afternoon at the Curtis school for the purpose of raising funds for the furnishing of a room at the Y. M. C. A. building.

The club members have been making preparations for weeks for the success of Mrs. [illegible] Parrish, Mr patroness, too, Misses Mills, Lacey [illegible] Pennsway, Gwladys [illegible], Kyle, Alkazin and Young, have rendered valuable assistance.

The art and Easter tables, presided over by Misses Anna Parrish and Helen Jackson, offered beautiful novelties, as did the fancy table presided over by Ella [illegible], Abigail Arndt and Beatrice Wetmore.

The tea room was attractively fitted up with bunches of matting and decorated with boughs bearing artificial almond blossoms, the national flower of Japan. Gay kimonas and large umbrellas, too, had place in the color scheme. Misses Helen Eyre and [illegible] Hall were in charge, assisted by Miss Anna Eyre, who sold delicious ice flowers, assisted by Miss Dorothy Palmer, and ice cream donated by Mrs J. A. Hayes and Mr Batchelor were on sale, as well as delicious homemade candy.

The numerous friends of the club members were there and patronized liberally; hence the goodly sum of $175 was netted for the furnishing of the Y. M. C. A. room.

PROGRAM FOR REUNION [illegible]

The program for the alumni reunion of Colorado college students has been announced and invitations to the gathering are being sent to all graduates and former students of the college over the country. June 6. Saturday p m.—University of Colorado vs. Colorado college baseball game. Evening Senior Glee club lawn party.

June 7—Sunday—Baccalaureate sermon.

June 9—Tuesday morning—Class day. Afternoon—Baseball game, Alumni vs. Varsity. Evening—Alumni reception and business meeting. (Senior reception by card).

CHANGES MADE IN NEW SCIENCE BUILDING

Frederic R. Hastings, the architect for the new Science building at Colorado college, stated yesterday that all of the iron and tiling for the roof of the building was on the ground and that work on that part of the building would be pushed with all possible haste. It is expected that the building will be entirely inclosed by the first week in May. The work of putting up the iron girders for the roof will take some time but with the frame work up the tiling can be done very rapidly. Several changes have been made in the laboratories as they were arranged in the original plans. The chemical and physical laboratories have been altered and enlarged and are now better adapted to the work of the college than they were on the original plans. A private study room for the instructor has been placed in the physical laboratory.

HALL'S CONCERT FOR BENEFIT O[illegible] Y. M. C. A.

One of the most entertaining concerts ever given in Colorado Springs is promised at the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday evening for the benefit of the room furnishing fund. The concert is under the direction of W. D. Halle and every effort is being put forth to perfect the singers in their respective parts. Mrs. W. A. [illegible] has kindly consented to sing and will be a great acquisition to the already attractive program. Mrs. Bennie has the correct method of voice delivery and vocal students cannot afford to miss the opportunity of hearing her on this occasion.

The following soloists will also appear:

A. Libby, Misses Pearl McMillan, Pearl Brand, Vivian, and Elizabeth Dickinson, violinist and cornetist; W. H. Rolston, Altari Bishop and Frank Young. Mr. Halle has organized a ladies' quadruple quartet that will appear for the first time in three concerted numbers. All the music selected for the evening is sparkling and bright, with a sufficient sprinkling of the comic to lend variety. The quintuple male quartet will appear at its best on this occasion in new music prepared especially for the concert.

EXTRA SEATS FOR THE THOMAS CONCERT

The phenomenal sale of tickets by the members of the Woman's club for the concert of Thursday evening next, by the celebrated Thomas orchestra has far surpassed the expectations of the most optimistic of their friends.

THE imposing structure situated in the northern part of this city, known as the Glockner sanatorium, was erected in 1891 by Mrs Glockner as a memorial to her husband, Albert Glockner, whose death occurred in Colorado Springs the preceding year. Mrs Glockner personally conducted the affairs of the sanatorium for two years with the services of a matron, but eventually she gave the work over to the Sisters of Charity of Cincinnati, Ohio.

When the sisters assumed charge of the sanatorium there was an indebtedness of $7,000 and many improvements were [illegible] immediately.

Sister Smith who was the first to take charge, remained about two years. The [illegible] Sister Fidelis for one year and Sister Xavier was the third, remaining for two years.

Under Rt Rev A Matz, the present incumbent, [illegible] in 1900. That she has widely and efficiently advanced the [illegible] interests, this record will show. Mother Rose took charge [illegible] on the property [illegible] 1902.

The End of Waiting...An Easter Romance

Written for the Gazette

BY

LELAH PALMER MORATH

[illegible] a jolly party which camped [illegible] in the beautiful mountain valley so long famous as a [illegible] resort for a certain clique of [illegible] society people, who were accustomed to spend the few weeks of hot weather, enjoying the invigorating influences of outdoor life in the mountains. These camping expeditions were said to [illegible] peculiar charms for the young people, and it was whispered that several interesting courtships now [illegible] in social circles dated their beginning [illegible] romantic wanderings "by wood and stream;" and, to be strictly truthful, the culinary skill displayed by all of the fair sex had enslaved [illegible] manly hearts or rather, perhaps far more potent than any others of a sentimental character. A week had already passed since leaving town, and on this [illegible] every evening, the entire party was gathered around the campfire, for the mountain air at night, even in July, was chill.

A young moon hung like a silver thread in the heavens, giving promise of glorious nights to come. To the right, a safe distance from the campfire clustered four white tents, within a semicircle formed by the carriages which had been drawn close around them as a sort of protection. On the other side stood the big, white-topped wagon—dubbed the "mess"—consecrated to the culinary department which was entirely given over to the cook and his assistant (a boy of 15) and by the light of the fire alongside could be noted active preparations for supper.

A chorus of song floated out upon the "listening ear of night," but when the last strains of "Old Folks at Home" had rolled up the hills and canons there was a silence which no one seemed to care to disturb by other melody foreign to its peculiar pathos and Teddy Collins' guitar thrummed on alone. That young gentleman was gracefully reclining upon a pile of fragrant pinon boughs, near the feet of pretty Beulah Carrington, who sat in a hammock, low swung between two pines, with her cousin, Violet Decker, and their chaperone Mrs. Jarvis, a young widow who might have been considered by some judges by far the prettiest and most winsome of the three.

Camping parties were never considered complete without Mr. Theodore Collins and his guitar, and to a musical and fun-loving company, they were unquestionably an invaluable complement. It was already evident that the guitar would be used to good advantage at the fest of the lovely Miss Carrington, for the young cavalier seized the present opportunity to lightly hum a popular love song, accompanied by appropriate glances.

Several older ladies drew apart from the circle of young people, for the firelight admitted the possibility of crochet-work and tatting, besides a lively game of "Forfeits" had driven them from the battle-ground in the circle, when the fun began.

"Have the Beldens come in yet?" asked Mrs. Clarkson, laying down her tatting with an air of having an important communication to make. Mrs. Howland shook her head—she was counting stitches—and did not reply for a moment.

"No," she answered, "they were to get in tonight before dark. I hope their friend will be agreeable. One 'crank' can spoil everything, and our crowd are all so congenial."

"I suppose they had to bring him along," responded Mrs. Clarkson. "It is too bad they were delayed. The drive down is tiresome if there isn't a jolly crowd." Mrs. Howland assented with a nod, and added "Army men are usually so awfully dignified. I dare say he will be shocked at so much levity." She glanced meaningly at the circle where hilarity grew fast and furious. "There are the Beldens!" suddenly cried Mrs. Clarkson, and she sprang up and rushed to embrace her friend; and Mrs. Howland observed an instruction to a tall, soldierly man who accompanied them.

Mrs. Belden beckoned, and, nothing loath, Mrs. Howland joined them. "Are they all here? What in the world is going on?" asked Mrs. Belden, gayly, after presenting Doctor Hamilton, a fine-looking man of middle age, with a soldierly bearing, whose kindly eyes and deep, quiet voice at once put everyone at ease.

"All here," answered her friend. "Won't you come on and meet them all?" "May I not postpone that ordeal this evening?" asked the doctor. "I have some important little matters I want to talk over with John, for my stay must necessarily be brief."

"We are yours to command, Doctor," said John Belden; "since you were good enough to join us. We can sit over late near the 'mess wagon,' smoke and talk."

"Oh, those two men are as bad as a couple of school-girls," said Mrs. Belden. "They want to talk secrets. They are old college cronies and haven't met for ages. Let them alone. We want to see the fun," and catching Mrs. Clarkson's hand they ran towards the camp-fire, and received a noisy welcome.

"We are just coaxin Mrs. Jarvis to sing. Wont you say one must?" said Teddy Collins. "We know she has a voice, and 'birds that can sing and won't,' must be coerced."

"I haven't sung for so long, I'm out of practice," mimicked Cliff Gordon—another irrepressible, bridling, and holding his throat in mock distress. "Sh—w—sh" came in hisses as Mrs. Jarvis took the guitar, and, after a few chords, her rich contralto voice filled the [illegible] silence with that exquisite melody De Koven has made immortal: "Oh, Promise Me!"

No one spoke for several moments after the last strains; to break the spell of music such a spell is not lightly broken, and everyone in that circle felt instinctively that the sweetness and pathos in the singer's voice was born of a heart [illegible]

[illegible] said one could [illegible] with her fine [illegible]. But Mrs. Jarvis did not [illegible] her heart upon [illegible] alive, and if this [illegible] grief he[illegible]

"'Friends, Romans and countrymen!' I rise to declare that we may live without love, and worry along without books, but camping parties won't not manage very well without cooks. I move we adjourn to supper.' (Applause) —whereupon John Belden bawled over to the mess wagon an inquiry regarding its progress. Harris, the cook, coming within convenient speaking distance, answered that on account of the large number of trout to prepare and a mishap to the first batch of biscuits, supper would not be ready for half an hour.

This announcement elicited much grumbling from the men, but it was [illegible] tantly. "But if you'll forgive me for being personal, I can convince Miss Decker that she is enjoying all the comforts of home in this camp. I remember, as though it were but yesterday, the day we arrived in that Indian village, where father went to gather [illegible]

Suddenly the guitar string broke and met by an observation from Mrs Belden that the delay could have been avoided had the gentlemen chosen to return sooner from their fishing excursion that day, or else allowed the trout to have been reserved for breakfast.

"I am truly thankful that it is not we girls who are over there cooking supper for these hungry people,' laughed Madge Barrow a jolly black-eyed matron, who with her young brother Will had joined the party 'to kill time during the absence of her liege lord in the east on a business trip.

'Cleaning fresh mountain trout enough for such a ravenous crowd is no joke, I can tell you' said Jeanette Belden.

"Nor baking biscuit" added pretty Beulah, whose cookery was famous, though she modestly disclaimed that fact. 'I believe I baked a million last year."

"Nor washing dishes" groaned Mr. Clarkson whereupon everyone laughed, recalling vividly the almost pathetic sufferings of that gentleman when called upon to take his turn with pan and mop, on former occasions when the cooking had been the ladies' work and the dish washing allotted to the gentlemen. However this season Mr Clarkson had been most active in securing the services of a man cook and his action was most heartily approved by all.

"I should think that one would find the cooking and dish-washing the hard side of camp life" ventured Miss Decker 'I fancy it extremely disagreeable to be obliged to dispense with so many conveniences although I know very little about the department." This was Miss Decker's first experience out of a brownstone front in "Bahston."

"Oh, my dear girl" ejaculated Mrs Jarvis, with a light laugh 'Very little of the hard side of camp life is apparent here. This is luxury compared to—to—well what has been endured by some I know of." Mrs Jarvis finished her sentence rather confusedly, for she was somewhat abashed by the offended air Miss Decker was assuming, for that young woman did not relish the fancied reproof, feeling it to be derogatory to her dignity. Miss Decker elevated her chin and tried to look very haughty and scornful, but Mrs. Clarkson came to the rescue just in time to help poor Miss Jarvis out of her embarrassment.

'I strongly suspect that Mrs Jarvis has been through some remarkable experiences Miss Violet. Let us punish her by demanding an explanation. That may have had something to do with her reluctance to venture out on this trip, for I had hard work to persuade her to come at all" and Mrs Clarkson smiled knowingly.

Mrs. Jarvis blushed but, willing to take the cue from her friend, answered. "Now, that is really too bad, Mrs Clarkson, to betray my weakness in that manner. You know that I really could not help feeling so after the awful experience."

"No riddles, now, Mrs. Jarvis 'Fess up and tell us a plain, unvarnished tale," begged pretty Beulah, pressing her arm about her friend's waist. "It's nothing really," began Mrs Jarvis, resolving with it the silence that had thus ended to become embarrassing.

Teddy arose to the occasion.

"'Friends, Romans and countrymen!' I rise to declare that we may live without love, and worry along without books, but camping parties won't not manage very well without cooks. I move we adjourn to supper.' (Applause) —whereupon John Belden bawled over to the mess wagon an inquiry regarding its progress. Harris, the cook, coming within convenient speaking distance, answered that on account of the large number of trout to prepare and a mishap to the first batch of biscuits, supper would not be ready for half an hour.

This announcement elicited much grumbling from the men, but it was [illegible] tantly. "But if you'll forgive me for being personal, I can convince Miss Decker that she is enjoying all the comforts of home in this camp. I remember, as though it were but yesterday, the day we arrived in that Indian village, where father went to gather [illegible] material for a book. To do this he took mother myself and two younger sisters and for nearly a year made our home among the Indians to study their habits and customs. A born missionary at heart and a skilful physician he soon endeared himself wonderfully to those wretched people.

Who says the Indian is incapable of affection? I never saw more touching devotion more sincere attachment than that displayed by those poor creatures towards my father and mother. We lived in their midst in one of their squalid dwellings changed by Christian civilization into a home, tho' a humble one ministering to them during the dreadful scourge of smallpox comforting the dying, aiding the suffering and when famine came upon them the readiness with which they shared with us their miserable food their pitiful measure of dried corn would make your heart ache to know.

Imagine the sorest straits to which a human being could come, when he would prepare for food the very dogs and donkeys which had been his companions! Poor old Padre Pino! Bent and shrivelled with the weight of ninety odd years, he followed my father, who lay upon what he thought was his death-bed, one hundred miles on foot, when we came away "my son, my son!" was his lament. And yet we say the Indian is best when dead.

She looked up smiling, but something bright glistened in many an eye. John Belden and Dr Hamilton had evidently exhausted their confidences, for they were seen loitering towards the group, but Mrs Jarvis was too much absorbed in her recollections to heed much going on around her. "I must hurry to the camping part," went on the narrator, "or you will be ready to believe it a humbug. Quite late in the winter a heavy snowstorm set in, and the snow fell for days continuously, threatening us with new peril for which we were entirely unprepared. It was the probability of being so blockaded with snow as to be unable to cross the mountains to Fort W—, where we obtained all of our supplies. Several weeks passed and twice the Indians made an effort to reach the fort, but returned after going 20 or 25 miles. Our extremity became alarming, for our provisions were running low, and the Indians could afford us but little help, for the were poor and suffering themselves. After nine weeks my parents, in desperation, resolved to make one last attempt to cross the mountains, so hiring an ox team and an Indian, they packed the wagon with a few necessaries and all our remaining provisions, a little tea, bacon, and several loaves of bread, and with us children set out on the awful journey from which might be no returning.

"All day we plodded laboriously along through great unbroken drifts of snow, over a trackless stretch of country. Just as night began to fall, the Indian stopped and, looking on beyond, shook his head decidedly.

"'Senor,' he grunted in Spanish as he waved his brown hand before him, 'there we cannot go.'

"He pointed to the oxen, standing in snow to their yokes.

"'They cannot do it,' he added, with more emphasis. I remember where we stood—near a high cliff—and close to the shelter of this the wagon was drawn, and with sinking hearts my parents realized that their efforts to [illegible] each help were fruitless, and we must return to the village the next day. The oxen were loosed and a huge fire was kindled, for fuel was scattered about in abundance. After our frugal supper the Indian dug a hole in the ground for his own slumbers while my poor father so feeble that he could with difficulty walk, remained outside to watch and keep the fire, for upon its warmth depended our lives. We children nestled about our mother, who sat close to the front of the wagon to share my father's vigil, for he was compelled to walk constantly back and forth to resist the effect of the severe cold upon him if he remained inactive for even a short time.

'And so passed the night of the greatest peril to us all, and it was indeed a camping experience of which even a young as I was could in a measure realize the horror and the poignancy of it can never leave my mind. I never see a white-topped wagon or a tent but it all comes back. Never was daybreak welcomed so gladly as that morning, though it was only to see no turn our faces homeward to meet what we could not tell dared not think.

You can realize how we might suffer before help from Fort W— [illegible] miles away and our only hope was that the army physician a young man who had formed a warm friendship with my father during the week we spent at the fort just before coming to the village might remember us in our desolation. We children adored him and I then about 12 years old remember an often I made to wait for him and felt exceedingly important when he answered that he should appear one day and take me at my word.

She paused a moment. 'But that enough?' she asked. 'Oh no!' cried a chorus. 'Just get into a thrilling story and leave it unfinished!' 'That is dreadful!' exclaimed John Belden.

On the afternoon of the second day after our return as our anxious eyes were eagerly scanning the snow-covered prairies and hills for some sign of aid we saw a dark object slowly moving toward the village. It seemed hours until it came near enough to discern a government wagon and four mules and longer still before it came up over the hill leading to our home and we ran eagerly forward to meet it. As we sprang from the seat the doctor from the fort. After satisfying himself that we were all alive and well the wagon was unloaded of supplies and mail everything in the world it seemed to us worth having and then the doctor told us of the strange presentiment of danger to us that had come to him two nights before in a dream. He awakened from a deep sleep and calling his man servant David from his bed said to him:

'David I feel that the Penfields are in great peril and need help. We must go to them at once.'

They arose and prepared everything, to start at dawn and after two days hard travel reached us. To this day we all think of him as our life preserver. Dear Doctor I often wonder where he is.'

'But did you not soon leave that terrible place?'

'Yes' answered the narrator as soon as the snow melted sufficiently.'

'But what became of that lovely doctor?' asked Mrs Belden with interested eagerness.

'He was ordered south two years later, and we never heard. That was 20 years ago."

Dr Hamilton got up so suddenly that his camp stool was overturned. 'Pardon me Miss Jarvis I see you do not remember me.'

One such experience in a lifetime is not likely to be confused with any other so we may as well claim old acquaintance, he continued cordially.

'Dr Hamilton' I cannot believe it' cried Mrs Jarvis springing to her feet amid a chorus of amazed exclamations from all sides, elicited by this romantic discovery. 'It does not seem possible' she continued incredulously as they shook hands warmly. 'The world is not so wide after all, is it?'

'Why didn't you reveal yourself sooner, Dr Hamilton?' asked Mrs Belden gayly as they trooped toward the mess wagon a few moments later in response to a call to supper.

'It would have been a pity to interrupt Mrs Jarvis story, wouldn't it?' replied Dr Hamilton. 'I was too much interested to do that.'

But Jeanette Belden whispered to her neighbor at the table as they sat down, 'Now, Julia Clarkson' Wait and see if we don't have a little romance on our hands before the summer is over.' But Mrs Clarkson shrugged her shoulders and smiled knowingly.

* * * * * *

The bright summer days were slipping by like golden beads upon a silken string and the mountain season was drawing to a close although five weeks had passed, no one desired to suggest breaking camp. The perfect days were spent in rambles after berries and flowers which were growing in such abundance among the wooded hills and canons and fishing rods were in constant demand, for the finest trout abounded in the clear cold mountain streams. The young people were never at a loss for agreeable pastimes, of course and Dr Hamilton himself had been heard to declare that it was as nearly Paradise as mortal man could desire. The gentlemen took turns in going occasionally to the city in quest of such creature comforts as tobacco and cigars, fruit newspapers and other et ceteras, thereby maintaining communication with the outside world.

One warm afternoon in August Dr Hamilton and Mr. Belden were absent on a trip to the city, and Mrs Belden and Mrs Clarkson were sitting under a tree in their hammock with crochet work and a basket of grapes indulging in a confidential gossip. The two ladies with Mrs Jarvis, had remained to keep camp for all the others had gone that morning with the two wagons further up the valley on a picnic.

'Where did Mrs Jarvis take herself after lunch?' asked Mrs Belden as she put a skein of zephyr over her friends hands, to wind.

'She took a little basket and said she was going after some berries but she seemed to want to be alone so I did not offer to go' answered Mrs Clarkson glancing up at the heavy clouds gathering over the sky. 'I thought this might be one of her sad anniversaries' she added sympathetically.

'Perhaps the day her husband died. Poor girl!' She has been sorrowful no doubt. She evidently mourns very deeply for she always wears black you notice and she has been a widow five years' continued Mrs Belden softly.

Yes she married very young. Her husband was nearly twice her age but a wealthy man' continued the other, adding anxiously after a pause 'If I do wish she would come back for it is going to rain.

Just as she finished pealing peal of thunder reverberated along the canons and recently had it not always when the rattle of wheels and sound of voices were heard and a light covered wagon appeared through the trees.

'Here are John and the doctor' cried Mrs Belden jumping up and dropping her yarn. 'Oh, I am so glad for I do dread those mountain rains and thunderstorms.'

Mrs Belden ran forward to meet the travelers as they drove up to the largest tent which was used as a sort of baggage room. Mrs Clark on dismounting her hands from the half wound skein of zephyr. The two gentlemen sprang out and after hastily greeting his wife Mr Belden said quickly as he and the doctor began unloading the wagon. 'I hope the ladies are all in camp. We're going to have a big rain. It's been pouring down the valley tremendously. Hamilton and I had to build on bridge to ford Porter this morning.

Mrs Belden was helping her in boxes already the big drops were coming down and Dr Hamilton was leading the horses away when Mrs Clarkson joined them.

'You ladies are all safe in camp I hope' said the doctor, stopping a moment to greet Mrs Clarkson.

On the contrary every one is out' replied Mrs Clarkson. 'The young people all went picnicking this morning and are undoubtedly safe but I am anxious for Mrs Jarvis. She went up the mountain to the berry patch but that has been three hours ago and Mrs Clarkson's face showed the anxiety she felt and she fancied that Dr Hamilton own countenance betrayed a slight shadow of solicitude as he answered her.

'If you would let me have a waterproof I might walk up the mountain in that direction and possibly meet her and save her from a drenching in this rain.

Mrs Clarkson readily accented and hastened to the tent for Mrs Jarvis waterproof while Dr Hamilton hurried the horse over to shelter before she returned. He was back in a moment with an umbrella and met her at the tent door as she gave him the wrap and overshoes rolled together.

'I suppose we ought to go back to town this week Jeanette' John Belden was saying to his wife who had seated herself upon a pile of blankets in the baggage tent to look over the contents of the lettter bag. Mr Belden had down his light load a quarter of fresh beef carefully sewed up in sacking as he spoke and turned to meet his wife's inquiring look.

'Hamilton will be obliged to leave tomorrow and of course we will not permit him to go alone. The time of his furlough is about up and he has to get back home next week. He insisted on coming out again with me I fancy it is the widow and Mr Belden smiled meaningly. 'You might begin to get our things together for I think we'd better go. But we needn't hurry the others.'

Meanwhile Dr Hamilton was gallantly making his way through thickets of scrub oak wild plum and cherry whose dripping branches were tangled with clematis vines rendering his progress rather difficult but it was evident from his direct course that he was familiar with the path. At length he came to a tiny stream along whose mossy banks grew wild berries in abundance and stopping looked about him. Hearing no sound but the downpour of rain and seeing no one he shouted repeatedly but in vain.

He continued along the banks of the brooklet a little farther and then shouted again, but this time it was:

'Beulah! Oh Beulah!'

'Doctor! Oh Dr Hamilton here I am!' cried a frightened voice barely audible amid the noise of the elements and underneath a huge wide spreading pine, he saw Mrs Jarvis standing on a broad stone, waving her handkerchief energetically.

'How did you happen this way?' she asked eagerly. 'I thought you were not to return until tomorrow.' She looked up gratefully as he approached.

'We came in a little while ago and found Mrs Clarkson anxious about your safety so I thought it might be well to step up this way with your storm-coat hoping to meet you" replied the doctor and as he spoke he unrolled the waterproof and wrapped it about Mrs Jarvis' shoulders.

'How exceedingly kind of you to think of me," she said smiling. 'In this drenching rain I would have gotten very wet. As it is I have not entirely escaped' and Mrs Jarvis dried her face with her handkerchief, for the driving rain had overtaken her before she reached shelter.

'You should not have ventured so far' one Mrs Jarvis began the doctor in a preachfully.

'Oh I am very brave' she answered gayly looking up as they drew back under the thickest branches but as she met the look of grave tenderness in his eyes as he bent over her standing beside him her face grew crimson and she felt her heart beating, wildly.

'I am glad you are alone though' said Dr Hamilton kept his eyes upon her face 'for I have something to say the I must say before I go away.'

'Go away' echoed Mrs Jarvis faintly.

'Yes [illegible] I must leave my work calls me back but oh how I wish to know that I may come again for you Beulah [illegible] you must know I love you. He [illegible] drew her gently near him that his lips touched her hair and his voice sank to a whisper.

Easter Sunday in the Shadow of Pike's Peak

One of the most notable musical organizations of Colorado Springs is the boy choir of 40 St. Stephen's church, all of whom have been members of the choir for as long a period as six years.

The organist and choir master is Mr. Samuel Jesson, formerly of England, but who came to Colorado Springs [illegible].

This choir has done some notable oratorio work in the last two or three years, including the Christmas selections from Haydn's Creation, Stainer's Crucifixion and Mendelssohn's St. Paul.

In addition to the boy choir, the adult members consist of five bass, four tenor and three alto.

Something seemed to whisper that the wind-kissed, white-lanced violet, dearer of the prairie, began to open, although the snow had started down-riggered from the uplands and the mountains were still in prisoned in ice, naked what matter that to the Coloradoan.

She was a newcomer; she had not been in Colorado Springs but a day or so, and her eyes had not become wearied as to the delicate change that began a week ago to make Nature's filmily the face of plain and mountain, to bring a violet color, an appealing, intangible, wonderfully beautiful "tone" in the harmony of things having to do with Nature. Not being of Colorado, as yet unacclimated and not brought into appreciation that is of long acquaintance, she tapped thoughtlessly on the rose-colored shade above the candle while she asked:

"Easter does not seem Easter in Colorado. With us in Maryland or in New York it is more of a feast of flowers than anything else."

"A feast of flowers?" I questioned. "Where does the resurrection come in, and, devout church-goer, all of the holy significance of the day?"

"Oh, that is understood, perfectly, that is really Easter you know. That is what we go to church for, but you do not grasp my meaning," she replied. "Easter is not the same to me here as it is 'at home.' Why, there is actually snow on the summit of the peak, and while driving today we saw great stretches of ice and were told that the men who were opening the big road were digging out the track from the snow."

Her shudder, the faintest of imaginable shudders just sufficient to cause the tendrils escaping from the fluffiness that appeared golden in the rose-red glow, to tremble over the forehead, gave me the idea that she had come to Colorado to escape snow, but she continued:

"Easter to my mind is ushered in by the search for arbutus. Do you remember the arbutus that we found in the woods in March—those pale-pink, lily-like blossoms thriving with such penetrating fragrance under the brown leaves of winter? Then the dogwood begins to blossom, the laurel comes out and, oh—" and the eagerness in the voice must have come from some alluring picture painted by the brush of memory—"the white, tumbling sea in the orchards when the fruit trees are in bloom."

"That is the Easter I know," she continued. "There isn't a bit of green on the trees in Colorado, none of the bushes is out and as for flowers! Who wants the florist's product when in the Land I Know Of, everything is bursting of its own accord into blossom."

"What does Easter mean to the Coloradoan?"

* * * * * *

"Probably more than to anyone anywhere else in this great country," I answered, ungrammatically, "that winter's spell is broken and spring is at last the visitor we are all so glad to welcome."

From the florist's point of view? she asked smilingly.

No. Because the date varies it may seem to you fresh from the blossoms of Maryland that Easter can not be the sign that Spring is leading Summer as rapidly as the April maid can travel to us. But it is a peculiar coincidence that Easter in Colorado is followed by the immediate budding of the trees and deciduous foliage. It brings the showers that woo to life the hardier plants and turn to a deeper, richer green the lawns that you may have noticed are already taking on another lease of life. It seems that it is the open sesame to all the wonderland Summer has in store. To the Coloradoan it means that Spring is here and if you could shake off the recollection of the bright loveliness of lilac and laurel, the dogwood and the lotus of the east you would see that almost stealthily as it adorned the mountains have donned another robe, a purple vestment brightened here and there with the tenderest of shades that harmonize and you would grant that the picture in water colors you now see will not can not be duplicated in the 12 months that elapse between the Easter day of 1903 and the Easter day of 1904.

Yes, she admitted. Water colors do fit the delicate purple browns and white that is true, but the mountains cannot furnish all of Easter day.

Don't you think that we enjoy [illegible] for those pleasures in life that it is hard to obtain? I suggested in response.

Oh, I don't know, he replied. Then enigmatically, Any pleasure is pleasure is it not?

I meant to observe. I forgot that the value of an American Beauty rose is much more apparently when it comes from the florists and when we know the fences and hedges are not lined with roses. In other words we [illegible] in Colorado Springs when the [illegible] and floral decoration in the church [illegible] most than would [illegible] the peak, were pyramid [illegible] orchards were filling the [illegible] with perfume.

Do you happen to [illegible] Maryland. I mused, [illegible] removed the salad and the [illegible] ought the [illegible] on [illegible] table, why it is that Easter Sunday means so much to the Coloradoan. It partakes of the [illegible] attaching to New Year. When the bells clash, like to you could [illegible] stroke of midnight we know that [illegible]

EASTER SERVICES

Today 9 at 3 the 9 Churches

The services today in Colorado Springs churches will be unusually elaborate and the churches will be decorated in floral magnificence.

Easter services at the Catholic church will consist of low mass at 6 30, communion mass at 8 o'clock this morning. At this service the Knights of Columbus and Ancient Order of Hibernians will attend in a body. It is expected that a large portion of the membership of both organizations will be present.

Solemn high mass will be celebrated at 10 o'clock. Those who will conduct this mass are celebrant, Father Bonsar; deacon, Father Rabar; sub-deacon, Father Clark; preacher, Father McDermott; master of ceremonies, Thomas Flannigan and incense bearer, Francis Fink.

A special musical program has been arranged for this service and the choir will consist of the organist, Carl Zittel; Grant; director Prof. J. P. Grant; soloists, Mrs. Metz, Mrs. Garrison and Miss Myles, sopranos; Mrs. Stephens, alto; Mr. Grant, basso and Mr. Zittel, tenor. Farmer's mass in B-flat will be rendered.

The church has been elaborately decorated and those who have had charge of the decorations have been busy in [illegible] the flowers during the past [illegible] days. The decorations were looked after by the Altar society under the [illegible] of Miss Mary Smith, president and Mrs. Gus Schutt, treasurer. [illegible] a floral piece of Easter lilies, [illegible] tier, which rises about 30 feet above the floor, the whole surrounded by white [illegible] and palms. Throughout the [illegible] lighted candles will add to the [illegible] of the scene. Electric lights [illegible] the display of flowers and in a circle above them will [illegible] to the [illegible].

[illegible] to be rendered by Rev. H. L. [illegible] anthem will be from the tone, "My Wayfaring Thou? Whom [illegible] Thou?" The keynote of the service and the Easter lesson will be "The Risen Savior."

The pulpit and table A. of the First Baptist church, will be beautifully decorated with banks of Easter Lilies white, Hyacinths and potted plants [illegible] Jesus [illegible] will be especially fine. At the close of the morning service the choral exercises participated in by the infant class of the Sunday school.

The Easter music at the First Congregational church will be especially noteworthy. The new soprano, Miss Pauline Parry with Miss Cooper and Messrs. Skinner and Clemens, constitute a choir of marked excellence. In addition to the Easter music by Buck, Schilling, Barnby, Shepherd, Schnecker and Gounod, the choir will be strengthened in the evening by the addition of a well-known Denver singer, Mrs. Emerson Elliott. Miss Beulah Whaite will render a violin solo in the evening.

The decorations at Grace church while simple are very beautiful. In the recesses on each side of the altar are placed potted plants, red being the prevailing color. In the center against a bank of palms are ranged rows of Easter lilies. The effect of this combination of colors, the white of the lilies signifying the purity of the Saviour and the red of the potted plants representing his blood, is very beautiful.

At St. Stephen's church the chancel has been covered with palms and Easter lilies, strings of smilax being laid across the front of the whole. In the windows have been placed Easter lilies, marguerites, geraniums and other potted plants. Bunches of cut Easter lilies are also placed about the altar.

AN EASTER TREASURE
(MISS MAY STOLLEY ROSE, COLORADO SPRINGS.)

EASTER SONG.

Down through the centuries floats a sweet strain
Millions grow dear have repeated the story,
Hills that followed have told it again;
Kings have crumbled and Time has grown hoary;
Over all grows the triumphant refrain;
Christ has arisen,
Out of the olden time,
Sweet all Christendom yearly 'tis telling.

Hope may fade away;
The old story forever is young.

Up to the future it beacons before us;
Out of the past it has blazoned the way;
Ever a pillar of fire it shines o'er us,
Like a cloud pillar it leads us each day.
All of the people are joining the chorus,
Swelling and growing in beauty for aye:
Christ has arisen
Ever living on to us,
Bringing the dawn to us,
Burning afar through the portals unsealing.

Life may be laid away;
Hope may fade away;
But the sweet story forever is young.

Hark! I hear the odor of lilies;
Lo, it is now in sweet Easter-time.
Voices of light with a prophecy thrill us,
Voices of glory out of a happier clime.
Voices that come out of the centuries fill us
Christ has arisen—
Yet, glorious,
Our death victorious;
So will the whole earth the glad song be singing.

Life may be laid away;
Hope may fade away;
But the sweet story forever is young.

Reception Teas

The only [illegible] of the week was that given by Mrs. E. F. Shepherd in honor of Miss [illegible] 14 North Nevada avenue, Wednesday afternoon, while [illegible] Trego by the [illegible] palms and [illegible] Vera Beauty [illegible] Will [illegible] Marion Lewis.

Most of us have pondered anew the origin and meaning of Easter; it is not difficult to believe that the word means something from the east.

The story told is that Easter or Venus, was supposed, before the Christian era, to have been hatched from a great egg which fell from heaven and rested on the Euphrates, where doves descended and taking the egg under their wings, hatched out this beautiful goddess. This explains why eggs are a favorite dish during the festival of this lovely deity, which was the goddess of spring and which the Saxons were accustomed to worship before Christianity was known by them.

When Christianity came to these people and they themselves became Christians and desired to commemorate the resurrection of Christ, which came about the same time of year, they preserved the celebration but gave to it the meaning of the resurrection of Christ, or changed the application of the ancient festival. This is why, according to eminent authority, the name was given of a heathen festival—the idea of the old was very similar to the thought of the new—the breaking forth of life.

We are apt to forget when the Christian Easter falls. It is the Sunday after the full moon next after the spring equinox, March 21. By this standard, Easter always occurs at the spring full moon, at which time the first Easter, the time of our Lord's resurrection, happened.

Our "Good Book" admonishes us to "Consider the lilies," for—"Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these," and at the risk of being sacrilegious, we are very apt to quote this extract from holy writ when we see the turn-out of bright faces and beautiful clothes. How fine the fabric, how exquisite in style and finish! The deftness of the manneur and the modiste is loudly proclaimed.

It is still the fashion to sport new finery on Easter Sunday, an old, and a good one, giving delight to many, for rich and poor alike honor the festival in that manner. The churches will be redolent, today, from the masses of choice blossoms—the rich will rustle in all the glory of new finery. It will be a real stroke of good fortune, if despite the throng, the rector's face is seen across the sea of picture hats.

Yes, this is all in all—the gladsome and glorious festival—this day that marks the advent of spring—a day that we would be very loath to have stricken from the calendar. None there are among us that does not have a longing for better, gentler lives. And, though we may not think it worth the while to embody and carry out a noble ideal in affairs, strict, yet, the doing of it would greatly enhance the happiness of ourselves and others.

"May each Easter in thine heart
Keep its holy festival!"

Social features are not as many as usual, perhaps, for Easter week, still the large party by the Warwick [illegible] Mr. Jay, the [illegible] What tournament Tuesday evening and the Theatre party Thursday evening, together with [illegible] will make up the sum of a busy day.

The W. [illegible] club, by the way, has [illegible] in the ceiling of the [illegible] which is to be the [illegible]

The management of the Young Men's Christian association has arranged to keep open house for the women of the city, every Wednesday from 2 until 5 p. m. Thus many who have been unable to inspect the beautiful new building will be given that opportunity. Quite a delegation of the Woman's auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. were present the past week and showed the callers through the apartments.

Miss Dorsey, the chairman of the entertainment committee, named the following members on the reception committee: Mrs. C. C. Dickey, Mrs. D. A. Russell, Mrs. A. H. Whaite, Mrs. W. H. Day, Mrs. John Lennox, Mrs. Thomas Craig, Mrs. J. J. Franklin, Mrs. J. W. Finkbiner, Mrs. F. C. Smith, Mrs. Waring, Mrs. Pennington, Mrs. F. M. Weathers and Mrs. E. G. Bennett.

Mrs. F. F. Castello gave an Easter party last evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Clara May Castello. Progressive peanuts was one of the merry games indulged in and prizes of Easter eggs in a fancy basket and a cartload of eggs drawn by rabbits were awarded. Easter souvenirs were presented to each of the guests.

A buffet supper was served from the dining table which was laid with Battenburg and decorated with a lovely basket filled with spring flowers, and pink candles with pink shades. Dancing, too, was much enjoyed by the guests among whom were Misses Margaret and Katherine, Ponier, Florence Stevens, Ruth Maxwell, Elsie Whitmarsh, Louie Nichols, Sally Brown, Russell Barnes, Frank Kimball, George Humphreys of Denver, Alfred Knight, Harry and Ray Puffer, David Brown, Charles Castello.

Two little neighbors, Caroline Allen and Odette Whalte, very delightfully celebrated their joint birthday anniversary on Friday when each was 6 years old, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Allen, on North Weber street. The little hostesses were the recipients of several pretty Easter souvenirs and had two delicious cakes bearing their names and dates, and pink and white candles. Merry games were played. Caroline, who is a gifted musician, played the piano and Odette danced some pretty fancy dances.

Among the guests invited were Margaret and Agnes Hale, Laura Eldredge, Maud Robinson, Lovelace Boyland, Hazel Cockran, Helen Pitman, Hazel and Ruth Davis, Willabelle Lennox, Helen Burkholder, Eleanor Parry, Edith Stark, Edith Baker, Lela Lierd, Lonie Nichols, Ethel and Gene Pratt, Ruth Rittenhouse, Catherine Shaa, Ann Frazier, Rawena and Gretta Williams, Eleanor Armit, Kathleen Kinsey, Rebe Shoup, Hily Clemen, Katie Kinney, Elisa Hobiltzell and Eleanor Parry.

The finest party ever given by the members of the Warwick club will occur in the Antlers ball room tomorrow evening. The Warwick parties have always been very delightful and invitations received by persons have been highly prized, especially for the one of Monday evening. The fine Antlers ball room will be decorated very tastefully for the occasion and nothing omitted that can in any degree contribute to the success of the party.

At his new residence, 1825 North Nevada avenue, Mr. C. H. Barnes delightfully entertained the male choir of the First Baptist church on Wednesday evening. At the conclusion of the regular choir practice the members of the choir were served with a delicious supper. As a souvenir of the happy occasion each participant received an Easter lily. Vocal solos by Mr. J. [illegible] Miller added much to the enjoyable evening.

Little Miss Lucile Murphy of Manitou, had a very enjoyable party Wednesday from 4 until 7 o'clock in celebration of her eighth birthday anniversary. Dainty refreshments were served and the little people had a lovely time.

Miss Nathan will give her coming reception to her pupils next Friday afternoon, at the Antlers. There will be several beautiful fancy dances, among them one entitled "The Chase." There will be a court dance, a minuet, etc.

That Mrs. Goddard has been the recipient of very pleasant social attentions while sojourning in the east, can be gathered from this clipping from the Detroit Journal:

"Mrs. W. K. Muir gave an informal tea Thursday afternoon for Mrs. Goddard, who arrived Wednesday from Colorado Springs, to visit her brother, H. H. Ledyard. Mrs. William J. Gray gave a luncheon for six Friday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Goddard. Yellow and white was the color scheme of the table and decorations."

The Sunday school class of Miss Ellen Brinley enjoyed a hunt for Easter eggs at the residence of their teacher on North Cascade avenue, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Winifred Boynton entertained quite a company of her young friends at her home on North Tejon street last Thursday evening, with dancing and games. Dainty refreshments were served.

An informal, but very pleasant thimble party was given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. James A. Lockhart in honor of her guest, Miss Ryan of Denver.

The dance given by Mr. Hillhouse at the Klimlimmick Friday night, was thoroughly enjoyable, and the following persons were among those who attended: The Misses Niles, George, Freyschlagg, Marsh, Link, Dew, Perry, Hart, Zimmerman, Nye, Thomas, DeGraff, Allman, Trask, Billington, Vaux, and Mesdames Link, Choate and Bradfield; Messrs. Devote, Poole, Ryor, Whiting, A. Hillhouse, Manchester, Black, Rudy, Nye, Sefley, Baker, Zimmerman, Slaughter, Morris, Masterson, Giles, Turner Seyffert, Johnson, Bradfield, Sprague and Duffy.

Dinners—Luncheons

A rather novel dinner was given by Messrs. Wulff and Hart at the home of the former on the west side last week to a few intimate friends. The decorations were American beauty roses. The menu cards were pen and ink drawings, the handiwork of Mr. Wulff. The menu, however, which was prepared entirely by the two hosts, consisted of corn in many different varieties, including mush, corn cream pie, cream of corn and many other varieties of this vegetable. It proved a very delightful occasion, and Messrs. Hart and Wulff were congratulated upon the success of their efforts.

Miss Maude Argust delightfully entertained a few friends Tuesday evening. The table was decorated with roses and lilies of the valley. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Hibb, Miss Ida Streeter, Florence Hill, Nan Carman, Nellie Downs, Messrs. Weymer, Will Cobb, Charlie Beals, Bert Davis, Mr. Argust.

Mrs. Leo W. Davis, 20 East Buena Ventura street, gave a pretty green and white luncheon on Friday in honor of Mrs. Will Wood and her daughter, Miss Frances Wood of Marshall, Mo. The other guests were Mrs. B. F. Shepherd, Mrs. William Lennox, Miss Lennox, Mrs. Frank Woods, Mrs. Heath, Mrs. Hunt of Victor, Mrs. William O'Brien.

A number of the younger society people went for an all-day picnic yesterday in the canon. Miss Marjory Mast was the chief one in arranging for the delightful outing. The party took both luncheon and supper at the canon.

Mrs. John S. Tucker and Mrs. Thomas Craig delighted about a dozen of the little folks of their neighborhood by taking them to the canon yesterday for an Easter outing.

Engaged—Married

The marriage of Mr. Charles Barclay Monge of this city and Miss Caroline Brown Thomson, daughter of Mrs. Everett Burbridge Thomson, occurred Tuesday, April 7. The ceremony was performed at 7:30 p. m. at the residence of the bride's brother, the Rev. Mr. Thomson, 150 South Las Robles avenue, Pasadena, Calif. Mr. Moore and bride left the same evening for Salt Lake City, via the Rio Grande Scenic line, thence they journeyed to this city, arriving last night.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Burk, 122 East Platte street, entertained informally at dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Moore last evening. The decorations were of American Beauty roses and Easter lilies.

Mr. Moore is the instructor in mathematics and Latin in the Ferris school. After April 22, Mr. and Mrs. Moore will be at home at 1203 North Tejon street.

The marriage of Mrs. Mary McCoy of Rocky Ford and Mr. Eli H. Woodring took place Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. C. L. Woodring, 302 South Prospect avenue. A few relatives and friends were witnesses of the ceremony performed by the Rev. C. H. Hinger. The couple will reside in Calhan where Mr. Woodring is engaged in business.

At the parsonage in Manitou, Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, the Rev. Herbert E. Lathe officiated at the marriage of Miss Lulu Dufferner and Mr. Albert V. Gilpin of Eldorado, Mo. At 6 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Gilpin departed for their future home, Eldorado, amid showers of rice and followed by the best wishes of many friends.

Card Parties

Last Saturday evening some of the members of the Substitute Card club paid a surprise visit to Mrs. W. S. Boynton at her North Tejon street residence. Four tables were made up and cards were enjoyed most of the evening until the ladies served the delicious refreshments that they had taken care to provide. The affair was a complimentary farewell to Mrs. Boynton previous to her departure for California.

The Thursday Bridge club met with Mrs. S. S. Bernard last week. In making up the four tables, Mrs. Scott and Miss Madge Sill substituted. Miss Ethel Hawke won the prize book, "The Daughter of a Sioux." Mrs. Daniel Thatcher is the next hostess.

Personal Mention

Attached to the regular morning train over the Short Line Friday morning was the special car of Mr. and Mrs. Sereno E. ver, assistant secretary of the state board of charities and corrections has accepted an invitation to speak in Mrs. Peavey's stead Wednesday, April 23. The subject will be "Crime." First, "Causes." Second, "Economic Conditions in Relation to Crime." Third, "Criminal Tendencies Among Boys." Fourth, "Women and Crime." Fifth, "Friendly Guardians for Boys and Girls." Sixth, "Boys' Clubs."

The North End W. C. T. U. meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Dr. Josephine Peavey. One important feature of the meeting was the discussion regarding the opening of a home for girls where for a reasonable sum they might find a home when out of employment, and also arrangements provided for board at a nominal sum. A committee consisting of Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Gledhill and Mrs. Embck, were appointed to arrange the matter with the other unions of the city. It was decided that the W. C. T. U. would furnish the drinking fountain for the new Y. M. C. A. building at a cost of $75. All desiring to subscribe to this fund may hand the amount to Mrs. Blake or Mrs. Conwell.

The superintendent of the Wine Y's having resigned, Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Purdy were appointed to fill the place. Dr. Peavy then read a helpful paper on "Purity in Schools." A lively discussion followed in which a number of ladies took part. The subject at the next meeting will be "Temperance and Labor."

The Four O'Clock Progress club met with Mrs. Hamilton, 1232 North Weber street the past week on Monday.

The Woman's union, home department of the First Congregational church, will meet next Friday at 3 p. m., at the residence of Mrs. F. S. Tucker, 915 North Cascade avenue. Devotional exercises led by Mrs. Rundquist; paper, "Preventives and Simple Remedies for Home Use," Dr. Peavey.

The management of the Y. W. C. A. is preparing to fill orders for baked beans, brown bread, cakes of several kinds for any one in need of home-baked food. Call at the home, 327 North Weber street or telephone Red 293.

The regular Saturday sales of home-baked food will probably be resumed in May.

Miss Flansburg will repeat, by request, her lecture on "Dante's "Divine Commedia," at the First Methodist church Thursday evening, April 16. The proceeds will be for the benefit of section No. 3 of the L. A. S.

The Ladies Aid society of the First Methodist church, section 2, served a fine supper at the church Thursday evening, the guests being the members of that section and their husbands.

Wednesday next, April 15, the annual election in the Art and Literature department of the Woman's club will be held at 3 p. m. in the Y. M. C. A. building. Mrs. Carrie Harper White will give the paper on "How to Judge a Picture and How to Frame a Picture."

The program for the coming year will be submitted by the committee. Also, a language class will be talked over especially as to what language shall be studied.

The regular meeting of the College Womens club will be held on Tuesday, April 14, at 4:15 p. m., at the home of Miss McAllister, 423 North Cascade avenue. Miss Edith Ely will present the subject of "Associated Charities."

Mr. Kew's Shakespeare class met on Friday at the home of Mrs. A. S. Littlefield. The subject before the class is still "King Lear." The members read in character the fourth act. The meeting commenced with a critique upon the whole play, dealing more particularly with the reunion for the tragic end of Cordelia. After the fourth act had been read, there was the usual annotation, inquiry and discussion about various points of interest in that act.

The meetings of the class for this season will be brought to a close on Friday next when it will assemble at the residence of Mrs. A. S. Littlefield.

The very successful series of lessons in cookery given under the auspices of the Home and Education department of the Woman's club closed on Monday last. The instructor, Mrs. Mary H. Snow, principal of the Colorado Domestic Science association, Denver, was eminently successful in her teaching and it was thought at one time that a second course could be carried out. Finally it was decided to defer the matter till fall.

The membership committee of the Woman's club will meet Tuesday, April 14, at 10 a. m. with Mrs. J. L. Franklin, 317 North Tejon street. Members must propose names at once or it will be impossible to embody them in the new calendar.

THE EGG AN EASTER SYMBOL THE WORLD OVER

An early legend of Easter says that on the night when the Saviour was laid in the sepulcher a nesting bird was brooding over her unhatched eggs in the branches of a nearby tree. Smitten with sorrow, the bird waited and dirged day and night until the angels came and rolled the stone away from the mouth of the sepulcher. Then as Christ, triumphing over death, came forth, this bird, rejoicing at the first glad Easter, broke out into jubilant notes: "He is risen! He is risen! Rejoice, all rejoice!" The glad sound was repeated by all the other birds, and even rocks, trees, leaves and shrubs chimed in to swell the happy chorus.

The connection of eggs with the Easter festival is a pagan idea. Easter stands for a new birth into life, the egg is emblematic of the origin of life. Hence the association. The custom of eating eggs on Easter day began in ancient times. In the reign of Edward I. a present of eggs, covered with gold leaf, was a royal Easter gift, and the Pope sent Henry VIII. for a present an egg in a silver case. But much earlier than this, the Druids, who regarded the egg as the symbol of the sun, and believed that the earth and other planets were hatched from it, wore an egg in gold hanging from a chain about the neck as a mark of their priestly and official rank.

The Chinese have a curious belief of the origin of the world from the two parts of a monster egg. From the yolk of it stepped out a man called Poon-kow-Wong, at the wave of whose hand the upper half of the egg shell rose and became the concave blue of the sky, the lower half turned over to form the convex earth, and the white albumen produced the seas.

The Hawaiians have a similar belief that their islands came from the explosion of a great egg laid by a gigantic flying bird as it passed over. The yolk burst-ing, formed the group of islands. Many other curious beliefs and superstitions have grown up around eggs in various lands.

The origin of the Easter custom of coloring eggs is given in the Versified tradition, where the "sweet bird" mentioned is the one that watched at the tomb:

Every shell that bird sat on
When Death bowed it was to the Lord of Light.
The eggs of that sweet bird changed their hue
Reminding mankind of their simple way
Of the holy hours of Easter Day.
Red symbolizes the blood of Christ; blue typifies the promise of hope; gold stands for the glory of heaven, and white for the purity of the sanctified soul. (New York Press.

A very little war is going on between the war department and the department of state over the non-payment of the expense account incurred by General Wilson while acting as one of the representatives of the United States at the coronation of King Edward. General Wilson rendered his account in a lump sum to Mr. Whitelaw Reid, who had charge of the appropriation to cover the expenses of the United States envoys. Mr. Reid requested an itemized account, and this General Wilson declined to render. There has been some lively correspondence between the two departments, the war department calling on the department of state for a settlement in General Wilson's behalf, and the state department sustaining Mr Reid in his demand for an itemized statement. Secretary Hay in one of his communications intimated that he would be willing to advance a couple of thousand dollars from his own private purse to get the perplexing question out of the department. If Secretary Root would do the same thing but Secretary Root has declined to do this, and so General Wilson's expense account of four or five thousand dollars is still being buffeted about between the conflicting positions taken by the two departments.

A notable gathering of humorous writers is to be held in Baltimore next month. About fifty of the newspaper and magazine humorists of the country will be entertained by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company. The event will be the first gathering of the kind ever held and will be a unique affair. Findley P. Dunne, George V. Hobart, George Ade, W. D. Neeblt, and other humorous writers of standing will be there. Each writer invited to be present has contributed to the Royal Blue book to be published by the Baltimore and Ohio an original literary gem.

THE MERRY MA-KA-MEN'S FEET

The death of W. E. Annin, who was familiarly known here by members of the newspaper profession, public officials, congressmen and others as "Billy Annin," is sincerely mourned. Mr. Annin was for years one of the brightest and most successful of the Washington correspondents who made Newspaper row famous. His initials, W. E. A., were familiar in many leading newspapers, and he was an up-to-date newsgatherer and brilliant writer. His fellow members of the Gridiron club, Washington's famous newspaper social organization, are showing their appreciation of Mr. Annin's worth in a practical manner. Long years of struggle against disease prevented Mr. Annin from accumulating much of anything to leave his family except his good name. The Gridiron club recognizing the situation has collected from among its own members a comfortable sum of money which will be presented to Mrs. Annin.

THE DEATH OF W. E. ANNIN

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Brigham, chairman of the government board for the world's fair, has a plan which will prove a valuable object lesson to foreign visitors to St. Louis next year. He has procured the use of a sunny slope of ground eight or ten acres in extent near the government building which will be laid off like a map of the United States. The boundary lines of states and territories will be pathways so that visitors may walk around each separate commonwealth. The products of every section will be represented, and will be growing at the opening of the exposition. Fields of rice will be growing in Louisiana, Texas and the Carolinas; sugar beets in Colorado and Utah; corn in Nebraska, wheat in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and so on.

A LESSON IN GEOGRAPHY

The War Board of the army has been holding executive sessions for the past week, arranging the general staff of the army under the provisions of the new general staff bill. It is understood that General S. B. M. Young will be the first chief of staff under the new organization. He will become lieutenant general of the army upon the retirement of Lieutenant General Miles next August. His own retirement will follow a few months later. It is conceded that Major General Chaffee, now in command of the Department of the East, will succeed General Young as the lieutenant general of the army, and under ordinary conditions this rank would make him the chief of staff. It is said, however, that General Chaffee has no desire to assume that position. He wishes to remain in command of the Department of the East where he can be in closer touch with the army itself than he could be in a purely executive position in the war department. This will leave the way open for General Corbin, and it is believed that he will be the second chief of staff of the army and will assume that position when General Young retires. General Young, General Chaffee, and General Corbin are warm personal friends, and the belief prevails that an understanding has been reached whereby the plan mentioned will be carried out. General Corbin is ambitious to become the chief of staff, and it looks to be reasonably certain that his ambition will be satisfied.

ARMY MEN AND THE STAFF

Well-dressed smooth-faced, dapper little Chinamen are everywhere in Washington this week. They are the students who have accompanied the new Chinese minister, Sh Cheng, and they are rapidly getting used to the ways of Washington. They learned, first of all that six street car tickets can be purchased for a quarter and their first trips of inspection of the city have been by trolley routes instead of by the legation carriages. On his first Sunday evening in the capital Sh Cheng and his suite were entertained at a dinner given by Sheng Tung first secretary of legation, and who has acted as charge d' affairs since the departure of Minister Wu. The banquet was oriental in its effect on account of the elegant costumes worn by the minister, attaches and students present, and the use of china brought from the orient. The entire building occupied by the Chinese minister and his suite was gaily decorated in the striking yellow and black of the Chinese empire. None but Chinamen were present at the banquet, and strictly home dishes were served.

CHINESE IN THE CITY

Readers of the Washington Post all over the country have been tickled and bored by the insistent appearance of the little bear in the Post's cartoons. Mr. Berryman, the cartoonist for the Post, made a tremendous hit with his bear, but had no intention of working the little fellow so hard. Mrs. Berryman urged his retirement to the scrap basket at an early date, but the Berryman baby sobbed frantically whenever a cartoon was evolved without "Johnnie Bear" in a conspicuous place. The president finally sent for the cartoonist and complimented him upon his clever use of brain. At one of the big official receptions Mr. Roosevelt introduced Mr. Berryman to Mrs. Roosevelt as the man who drew the little bears that amused her so much. Since then, not a cartoon appears but has tucked away in a convenient corner a most deeply interested bear. They say that the badge for the presidential campaign will have one for decoration. With three dots and a circle of fringe Mr. Berryman has evolved an emblem for the Roosevelt party that is popular with all ages.

BERRYMAN AND HIS BEAR

Miss Dorothy Flynn, the only daughter of former delegate, Dennis Flynn of Oklahoma, will be married in this city on Monday evening, April 20, to Dr. James Julius Richardson. Miss Flynn is the belle of Oklahoma territory, which her father has represented in congress almost continuously since its creation. She is a petite brunette whose vivacity is one of her charming characteristics. Dr. Richardson is a well-known physician of this city who recently accompanied President Roosevelt on a western trip. Dr. Richardson and his bride will take a three months' bridal trip through Europe.

OKLAHOMA TO BE ARMED

Of the possible five hundred nominations placed at the disposal of members of congress for cadetships at Annapolis, already two hundred have been made. Strange, to say, members of congress find difficulty in finding young men of the required age between fifteen and twenty who are capable of passing the entrance examination to Annapolis. The examination is in the common English branches, but is particularly thorough, and the graduates of our present day school system do not seem sufficiently well grounded in spelling, arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, and like studies, to pass the critical standard set up for applicants who desire to enter the academy. Examinations will be held throughout the country on April 21, a second will be [illegible]

Gotham's Women in Gambling.

It is more patent to every observer that the triumphant classes of New York are infected with the gambling craze as never in any previous period of high times, says David Graham Phillips in Collier's Weekly. It is [illegible] to $15,000 a day.

When [illegible] any gambling [illegible] even if the average bet is no higher than [illegible]

Then there are the women of more or less social pretensions. The Wall St. woman is no new phenomenon in New York. But she was, as a rule, a sexless looking creature, skin tough and sallow, toilet [illegible] and dowdy; and sat about the "ladies' department" of the uptown branches of big brokerage houses, making her bets and winning or losing with perfect self-control; as full of tricks as a fox was she, but not fascinating to behold, or in any way a noticeable factor in public markets. The new Wall street woman is not of kin to the old, does not suggest her except as all human beings suggest each other through the participation of universal traits. She comes in carriage or cab to the "ladies' department" of those brokerage firms that have the courage to take the extra risks of female trade; she spends an hour or so there, her eye on the tape, her hand on her smelling salts, having won or lost all she cares or dares to risk that day, she goes her way.

At Saratoga in summer, at Palm Beach in winter, and at Aiken also, the more or less public gaming table—that is private club or the private room in the gambling house—is not only permitted, but fashionable.

Stock gambling, of course, as yet attracts fewer of these fashionable women with the gambling fad. It calls for study, for a long and tedious education; and women of fashion have too many drafts upon their time already. There are some who intrust money to men friends to bet for them, but that is not gambling for the woman. The "gamble" is altogether for the trusted man, who would hardly be so ungallant and even cruel—not to say imprudent, for that would sound cynical—as to let a confiding and helpless woman lose through his lack of luck or wit. The real stock gambling woman of fashion, doing the gambling herself, using her own judgment, reinforced or confused by "tips" gathered at random, staking her own income or her father's or husband's allowance to her, is as yet a rarity. But she is an interesting rarity, as she lies abed with her telephone at her indolent elbow and with smiles or frowns—in great crises in the street, tears—upon her petulant face. Thanks to the telephone, she gambles at her ease, and in the seclusion of her home, of her bedroom. And apparently she is the heralding swallow of the oncoming flock. There are still few husbands with tales of how scantily they are fed because "my wife came a cropper on steel last month and dropped her house money as well as her personal allowance." But those few, unless all signs fail, also are heralds of a flock—a mournful flock.

This gambling craze is the latest phase and extreme of an extraordinary incredible development—the transformation of New York from a rich, rather sober city into a world-capital, within less than 15 years.

Yes, a man meets with some peculiar experiences on the road, remarked the suspender salesman in the lobby of the Palmer house the other evening, but the funniest thing in my memory was the incident which made for me a solid customer when I thought I was giving the man the worst of a deal.

"I was making my first trip through the west at the time," he continued after a little urging and a fresh light "and among other things I carried a line of light weight suspenders with a new patent end. They had sold well to the swell haberdashers but were not adapted to the requirements of a laboring man, and I had no luck with them in the smaller towns.

"One day I dropped off at a high grass village in Kansas and in less than 10 minutes I knew I was in the wrong pew. There was only one merchant in town worth selling and he carried a general stock embracing the probable wants of the farmers in the vicinity. I would have passed up the deal and gone to the next town but was informed that the first train would not come along until 9:30 in the evening, and it was then but 9 in the morning.

"I had made a point of making each day's business pay its own expenses and I just had to sell that guy a bill of goods and under my system could not take no for an answer.

"I drifted right up to the store, butted in, sized up the stock, made up my mind it was suspenders he needed, and a bluff at him on the subject but got an answer that would have sent a new drummer to the telegraph office with his resignation.

"It didn't bother me any, though, for I had made up my mind he was going to buy suspenders, and suspenders I was going to sell him, but there was no hurry about it.

"Luck was still against me, so I took another promenade into the suburb. In about an hour I hiked back to the store and opened up a gabfest with the son. I soon discovered that the boy had dreams of going to a big town and developing into a thoroughbred.

"Here was my cue. In a few short minutes I had pointed out to him the advantages of being well dressed and especially in the attention which should be paid to details of neckwear, cuffs, standing collars, and, yes—even to the small matter of galluses.

"Well, in two more calls I had the old man looking at my samples just to please the boy. One more short walk and he was interested and before the evening train arrived my book contained a signed order for 50 dozen of suspenders, which I knew he would have on his hands as long as he might be in business.

"Yes, it was a low-down, shanty trick but I was young then, and needed the money.

"Well I was over that territory several times after that, but passed right through that town until one day about two years after, I forgot the incident, until I was out on the platform with my trunks and the train was about a quarter of a mile beyond the station.

"Then I remembered the spot and recalled the incident, but I made up my mind the old boy would not remember me, and I would say nothing about the suspenders while I tried to land him on something else.

"'Is Mr. Whitcomb's in?' I asked, as though I had no idea of his identity.

"Then pointing to the top of it, he continued: 'There they are, as good as new, and I wouldn't take 10 a dozen for them now, although you could get me only $8.'

"I was somewhat taken back, but responded: 'I know our goods were getting better all the time, but have hardly seen such a demonstration of appreciation as this.'

"Realizing, however, that the top shelf was the worst kind of a place for rubber goods I led him: 'You had better get them down where the heat won't ruin them. Not only that, but you will be more likely to sell them if you have them handy.'

"'Say, young fellow,' he answered 'don't try to tell me my business. I want that pile of goodness right up there where I can see them. Every time a fresh drummer comes to work off something new on me I look up at that pile of boxes, strengthen my will power, and refuse to buy. Why, do you know, that lot of goods has saved me several thousand dollars this year. I would have tied up in dead stock, and I never was so glad to see anybody as I am you. I want to thank you for grafting me the way you did. I don't know how much your house pays you, but whatever it is, it's only half enough.'

"Well, would you believe it,' concluded the drummer, 'that fellow bought a big through file in one of the best customers I have in Kansas, and he takes me up to his house to dinner every time I make the town. I got even from me that trip, and I sell him something every time I go to town."—Chicago Journal.

Rent for Street Car Seat.

They jolted along for about two blocks after the man paid his fare, then, with a mighty jerk, the car came to a dead stop. When it had stood so for more than an hour the man conceived the brilliant idea of trying to get up town by means of some other line, and he approached the conductor in a friendly manner and asked him to give him his money back. The conductor did not respond in like fraternal spirit.

"Can't do it," he said.

"Oh, now, see here," argued the man. "This is not right. I rode less than two blocks in your old car, and it is barefaced robbery to take a man's money for a little jaunt like that."

And then was when the conductor got in his deadly work. "I ain't chargin' you for the ride," he said. "Ain't you been settin' here in the car for the last hour, and ain't you willin' to pay for that? You can't go any place in this town without payin' rent, and you might as well pay it in a nice, warm street car as any place else."

"Well, I'll swear!" said the man, and the idea of paying rent in a street car struck him as being so novel and so thrilled him with appreciation of favors received that he went away without even thinking of his nickel again.—(New York Times.

Discovered Their Hero.

"One would think," said a prominent educator recently, "that the average 12-year-old schoolboy knew something about Horace Greeley. Well, not long ago I was visiting a down-town school. The class before me was composed of boys from 11 to 15 years of age. To show them off the teacher began to ask questions about prominent Americans. The lads got along fairly well until they were asked about Greeley. At the mention of his name not a hand went up to indicate that he had been heard before. The teacher tried to help his pupils by asking:

"'How many of you sell papers before coming to school?'

"The hand of every third boy went up.

"What papers do you sell?' was the next question.

"All the morning papers were mentioned, but the one founded by the great editor stirred no mental processes to reveal his identity. They never had heard of him. Then I took part in the quizzing by asking,

"Who can tell me anything about Jesse James?'

"Every boy in the room put up a hand. Some in their eagerness to display their acquaintance with the career of the eminent Missourian jumped to their feet and held up both hands."—(Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Highest Court.

In Colorado is a small town which has the distinction of being away up above Cripple Creek as well as 11,000 feet above sea level.

In the month of May not many years since they carried the mail to this town on snow shoes a distance of 150 miles. So you see, it is of some importance.

It would be important if for no other reason than that it boasts of a justice of the peace, and he is as important as any other functionary of his class. However he has a lot of solid horse sense.

A suit was to be tried before him, and one of the parties stirred the community from center to circumpass by sending off and importing a lawyer.

That case dragged itself out to an unprecedented length, and the populace had never dreamed that the law was so full of objections and exceptions motions, protests, expostulations and the like as that lawyer proved it to be. He was to them another wonder of the world.

But there was one thing he couldn't prolong and that was the prompt, snap decisive, "judgment for the plaintiff" that his honor snapped out as soon as the trial was fairly over and almost before.

"Well sir," said the lawyer in tones of superiority, "we will have to take this case to a higher court."

"There ain't no higher court sir. This court is thirteen thousand two hundred feet above the level of the sea sir. I'll have you to distinctly understand, sir, that it is the highest court in all this broad land, sir."—(Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Prayer for Reporters.

Some years ago the chaplain of the Minnesota senate addressed the windup of his prayer to the newspaper men as follows: "And now, dear Lord, bless the reporters whose nimble pens catch on every word almost before it is uttered. Like thyself they are omnipresent and almost omnipotent. If we take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, they are there. They meet us in the jungles of Africa, they waylay us in the wolf-haunted canons of Colorado and when at length we find the altitude of the magnetic pole behold they are there. May their light and goodness be equal to their power, and when the general assembly of heaven convenes, let no reporter be excluded. Amen."

Women Will Vote if Given the Opportunity.

An article in the April Pearsons will tend to disprove the trite assertion that women do not care to vote, and would not take the trouble to do so even if given the privilege of the ballot. The author says:

"If the relation of the women vote to the total vote cast at the elections of the last few years be the test of the relative value put upon the franchise by both men and women, to the women must be awarded the palm for faithful discharge of the highest function of citizenship. There are between 30 and 35 thousand more men than women voters in Colorado. Yet, so far as the figures can be had, and they have been obtained for all but the last state election, which occurred November 4, 1902—the woman vote has attained a high average. Fifty-two per cent, 51, 49, 47 and 48 per cent of the total vote cast has been by women's hands in accordance with the dictates of the conscientious and intelligent consideration of public questions nearly always given to such subjects by Colorado women.

Last Will and Testament OF

In the Name of God, Amen: I, [illegible], of the City of [illegible], County of El Paso, and State of Colorado, being in full [illegible] and mindful, do hereby [illegible] acknowledge and declare this my last will and testament, hereby revoking any and all wills and codicils by me at any time heretofore made.

First: I hereby direct that my funeral be held in the [illegible] by me [illegible] in the City of Colorado Springs, by the [illegible] Anna Chamberlin, of which I am a member, be used for [illegible] and that my funeral and burial [illegible] and all just debts and [illegible] I will be first paid out of my [illegible]

Second: I [illegible] give and bequeath unto my nephew, Carl Stratton Chamberlin, now of No. [illegible] Eighth street, Brooklyn, New York, all my household furniture, including all articles of my personal apparel, jewels and ornaments, [illegible], souvenirs, cabinets of mineral and curios, statuary and paintings, and all books, papers, manuscripts, letters and [illegible] of which I shall die seised. This bequest does not include my general personal property, moneys, credits or evidences of indebtedness, or things in action, or [illegible], engagements, contracts, abstracts, [illegible] of title or other documents [illegible] be useful to my executors in the settlement and distribution of my estate.

Third: All the rest, residue and remainder of the estate of which I may die seised and possessed, or to which I may be entitled at the time of my decease, of whatsoever nature, real, personal or mixed, and wheresoever situated, I give, devise and bequeath unto my executors hereinafter named, in trust, however, to convert and dispose of them in the manner hereinafter stated.

Fourth: I direct that my said executors [illegible] as soon as they conveniently can, and within the period required by law, after the death of me, the said testator, to make sale and disposal of all the [illegible] personal estate of which I may die seised and possessed, and which is by this will vested in them in trust, at such prices and upon such terms as to them or to the majority of them shall seem most advantageous, and by giving and granting unto my said executors or unto the majority of them full power and authority to make, execute and deliver to the purchasers such proper deeds and instruments of conveyance, acquittance, relinquishment and transfer as may be necessary to vest in the purchasers full title to the property so sold and disposed of.

Fifth: I direct my said executors to pay over and deliver to my nephew, Earl W. Hamlin, son of my deceased sister, Mrs. Harriet N. Hamlin of Jeffersonville, Clark county, Indiana, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars out of the proceeds of my said estate.

And to my nephew, Harry B. Hamlin, son of my said sister, Mrs. Harriet N. Hamlin, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars, out of the proceeds of my said estate.

And if either of said legatees be deceased at the time of my decease or before the payment of said legacies as herein directed, I direct my said executors to pay to the heirs at law of such deceased legatee the whole amount of the legacy of such deceased legatee.

Sixth: I direct my said executors to pay to my sister, Mrs. Jennie Stratton Cobb of San Jose, Santa Clara county, California, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars out of the proceeds of my estate.

And to my niece, Mrs. Mary Cobb Smith, daughter of my said sister, Mrs. Jennie Stratton Cobb, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars out of the proceeds of my estate.

And to my niece, Lillian M. Cobb, daughter of my said sister, Mrs. Jennie Stratton Cobb the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars, out of the proceeds of my said estate.

And if any of said legatees be deceased at the time of my decease or before the payment of said legacies as herein directed, I direct my said executors to pay to the heirs at law, of such deceased legatee, the whole amount of the legacy of such deceased legatee.

Seventh: I direct my said executors to pay to my niece, Elma Pearl Chamberlin, the daughter of my deceased sister, Mrs. Anna Chamberlin, said niece being now of No. 318 East Sixteenth street, Brooklyn, New York, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars out of the proceeds of my said estate.

And to my niece, Mrs. Clair Marie Babcock, daughter of my deceased sister, Mrs. Anna Chamberlin, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars, out of the proceeds of my said estate.

And to my nephew, Carl Stratton Chamberlin, son of my deceased sister, Mrs. Anna Chamberlin, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars, out of the proceeds of my said estate. And if any of said legatees be deceased at the time of my decease or before the payment of said legacies as herein directed, I direct my said executors to pay to the heirs at law of such deceased legatee the whole amount of the legacy of such deceased legatee.

Eighth: I direct my said executors to pay to my son, I. Harry Stratton of Tulon, Stark county, Illinois, the full sum of fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars out of the proceeds of my estate, should he be living at the time of my death, but in the event of his decease before my decease shall occur, said legacy shall not go to the heirs of my said son, but shall, in that event, become a part of the residuum of my estate, and shall be paid by my said executors to the residuary legatee of this will; and this legacy shall be paid to my said son only upon the express condition that he shall not directly nor indirectly contest this will or institute or maintain in law or equity, any suit or other proceeding whereby it is sought to set aside, annul or defeat said will, and if my said son shall directly or indirectly contest this will or if he or any one for him shall institute or maintain or cause to be instituted or maintained in law or equity any suit or other proceeding whereby it is sought to set aside, annul or defeat said will, then and in that event said legacy shall be and become and remain absolutely null and void, and the sum so bequeathed shall become a part of the residuum of my estate and shall be paid by my said executors to the residuary legatee of this will.

Ninth: I direct my said executors to pay to Byron C. Logan, of the city of Indianapolis, in the state of Indiana my friend, the full sum of ten thousand ($10,000) dollars, out of the proceeds of my said estate.

And in the event of the decease of said legatee by decease or before the payment of said legacy to him as herein directed, then to pay over to his heirs at law the whole amount of said legacy.

Tenth: I direct my said executors to pay to the trustee of the "Institute for the Education of Mute and Blind," located at the City of Colorado Springs in the county of El Paso and state of Colorado, the full sum of twenty-five thousand ($25,000) dollars, out of the proceeds of my said estate, in trust however for the following purposes. Said sum shall be invested by said trustees in good and safe interest-bearing securities, interest to be paid thereon to said trustees annually or semi-annually, as they shall direct, and such interest shall be paid by them to the superintendent of said institute and by him annually distributed among the pupils of said institute as rewards for such excellence in scholarship or demeanor or both as may be prescribed or required by the said trustees.

Eleventh: I hereby direct that in the event of any of the foregoing legacies and bequests lapsing or becoming void under decree of court or under any other circumstances whatsoever, such legacy or legacies so lapsing or becoming void shall be and become in that event a part of the residuum of my estate and I direct my executors to pay the same to my residuary legatee for the purpose hereinafter named.

Twelfth: I direct my said executors after the full payment and satisfaction of all the several legacies and bequests hereinbefore given devised and bequeathed to the several persons and institutions named herein and after the payment of all of the legal and just costs, charges and expenses arising from the collection and creation, settlement and distribution of my estate, to pay over all the rest, residue and remainder of my said estate, of each and every kind and character and wheresoever situated, unto Dr. D. H. Rice, Moses Hallett and Ts on S. Ellis in trust however, for the following purposes. All sums of money received by said trustees from my said executors shall be invested as speedily as possible in such interest-bearing securities which shall be selected by them with special care for the preservation thereof without loss or depreciation of the principal sum so invested and for the securing of as large an income therefrom as may be consistent with the safety and preservation of the sums so invested.

After the payment of all legal and just costs and expenses connected with the execution of said trust, including suitable and just compensation to said trustees, to be allowed and approved by the district court of El Paso county, Colorado I direct said trustees to pay over and deliver to the trustees of a corporation to be created and organized by me during my lifetime or by them after my decease under the laws of the state of Colorado for charitable purposes only, the name of which shall be "The Myron Stratton Home," in memory of my father, all the property, moneys, credits, notes, bonds mortgages and evidences of debt of every kind whatsoever remaining in their hands to be applied to the carrying out of the objects and purposes of such corporation as follows.

The purpose for which said corporation shall be created and to which this bequest is devoted is and shall be the erection, furnishing and maintenance of a free home for poor persons who are without means of support and who are physically unable by reason of old age, youth, sickness or other infirmity to earn a livelihood and who are not by reason of disease, insanity, gross imbecility or immorality unfit to associate with worthy persons of the condition in life above named. The inmates of said home shall be selected by the board of trustees of said corporation, that is from poor persons of the condition above stated, who are actual residents of the county of El Paso in the state of Colorado and second from any poor persons of the conditions above stated, who are at the time of their selection actual residents of any other county in the state of Colorado who shall be admitted thereto by the order of priority of their application up to the full capacity of said home to accommodate and provide for them without such inconvenience to persons who shall at the time of their application be inmates of said home.

A suitable sum not exceeding the sum of one million dollars ($1,000,000) out of the bequest shall be expended in purchasing suitable grounds and a site for said home within the county of El Paso and state of Colorado and in erecting, furnishing and equipping the necessary buildings for the use of the inmates of said home and for the maintenance of careful supervision over the erection of said buildings and improvements and beautification of said grounds. All the balance and remainder of this bequest shall be kept carefully invested in good and safe interest bearing securities, and all the proceeds or income derived from such investments shall be expended under the direction of the trustees, directors or managers of said corporation with the by-laws of said corporation, for the maintenance and support of said Home and to the payment of all expenses of repairing superintending and conducting the same including suitable compensation to said trustees all of which expenditures and disbursements shall be subject to the inspection and approval of the district court of El Paso county, Colorado, or to the inspection and approval of such auditing committee or board of inspection as may be provided for in the by-laws of said The Myron Stratton Home. It is my especial desire and command that the inmates of the said home shall not be clothed and fed as paupers usually are at public expense but that they shall be decently and comfortably clothed and supplied with good and wholesome food and with the necessary medicines and all proper care and nursing to protect their health and to cure their ailments.

And that no inmate of said home shall be constructively ejected from her will to perform an unusual task for the benefit of said home and relief of the labor performed by the [illegible] meeting [illegible] officers or employees of said home nor any of the [illegible] contained in any [illegible] which shall be deemed void.

A full and specific [illegible] shall be drawn [illegible] and in accordance with the laws of the said State of Colorado relating to the creation and conducting of said home subject to inspection and approval of the [illegible] and all provisions of the said deed of dedication of the grounds and of the [illegible] shall be carried out and observed by the trustees, directors or managers of said corporation so that the said home shall be protected in every way that will best subserve the interests and purposes of the said home and the inmates thereof.

Eleventh: I hereby nominate and appoint Carl Chamberlin [illegible] executor of this my last will and testament.

In witness whereof I have with my own hand [illegible] all the sheets of this my last will and testament [illegible] and have hereunto set my hand and seal and have signed and sealed the same in the presence of the subscribing witnesses who have also signed their names hereto in my presence and in the presence of each other at my request this [illegible] day of [illegible] A. D. 1902.

Witness [illegible]

The foregoing instrument was [illegible] by the testator [illegible] as and for his last will and testament in our presence and in the presence of each other and we [illegible] at his request have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses thereto this [illegible] day of [illegible] A. D. 1902.

[illegible] Leaves of the Lilies

By Warren Harper

OVER THE SEAS from the dream-islands of Bermuda comes sailing, toward the last of March, many a ship laden with those stately lilies that on Easter day we see blossom forth in all their glory from the altars of our American churches. Very few of these flowers are not hothouse grown; practically all of them first see the light of day in that wild-ocean garden spot to the south. And the people of the United States, with the love they have for the beautiful things that symbolize an event or a season, spend annually at this time of the year upward of half a million of dollars for these delicate blooms that reign supreme for a day and then lapse into perennial sleep.

It is said that the lily which we invariably associate with Easter and with the Bermudas was originally brought there from Japan, but be that as it may, a generation or two ago this lily was as common there in the islands as the May daisy in our New England fields. Nobody thought of it as worth special cultivation, or as a profitable article of commerce. The gentle climate and the rich volcanic soil caused it to thrive in a marvelous fashion. It lent beauty and sweetness to every acre of the small islands, but the native saw in it neither a symbol of the resurrection nor any particular emblem of purity and spirituality. He was more interested in the equally fragrant Bermuda onion and in the potato, two products that time out of mind have proved the chief sources of revenue to him.

And then the American tourist came along, and according to his recognized habit, began to exploit things. He conceived the idea that a few of these glorious lilies would be good things to ship home as gifts to flower-loving friends, which is like the way they have in Florida of sending orange blossoms north. So he sent some, with his compliments of the season. The first few attempts were not successful; the blossoms on reaching their destination were hardly in a healthy enough condition to have made the express charges worth while. But shortly, by packing the blossoms in lasting material boxes, it was found that they were fairly certain to come through in good condition.

This practice of the tourists of sending floral mementoes home seemed as a hint to the florists who for a long time had been trying to discover some method by which the Bermuda lilies might be successfully imported into this country. Simultaneously with this the native gardeners [illegible] known an accidental bulb, horticulturally called a "sport," which opened up great possibilities by blooming earlier than the other varieties, and by being more robust and prolific. With an unlimited American market only two days' sail away, lily growing thus immediately became an important industry in this isolated little colony. Anglo-Saxon [illegible] and a weekly line of steamers between the Bermudas and New York have [illegible] the rest.

Bermuda is Bermuda, and its Easter lily is so bountiful with us at this season of the year all because the Gulf Stream in its great sweep across the Atlantic saw fit to come close to this small group of volcanic peaks, [illegible] due east from Charleston, S.
